Annexation of Hawaii is a Possibility.

Proposition Seriously Broached at Washington.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, June 12.—The Republican Senators were in caucus for two hours today, and devoted the entire time to an effort to agree upon a course of action to be pursued with regard to the Hawalian reciprocity treaty in connection with the sugar schedule of the Tariff Bill. The meet-ing of the Senate at 12 o'clock forced an adjournment before there was time to reach a conclusion, and the caucus dispersed to meet again at 4:30 in the afternoon.

Half a dozen different propositions were submitted to the caucus, the principal of which were the following: By Senator Frye. To leave it absolutely to the President to say what shall be done with the treaty, and providing against any interference with the provisions of the treaty, pending any action he may take.

By Senator Allison. A proposition very much the same as Senator Frye's but intimating more clearly to the President the opinion of Congress that the treaty should be modified.

By Senator Perkins. A provision giving notice that unless something is done within a year to continue the treaty in force, it shall be abrogated. Senator Nelson of Minnesota led the fight in favor of the abrogation of the

At Senator Thurston's suggestion he modified the proposition so as to make the rate in the future conform to the requirements of whatever treaty might be negotiated in the future. Senator Thurston announced himself as decidedly in favor of abrogation, although he was, he said, a believer in the wisdom of annexing the Hawaiian islands to the United States, he said that if the present arrangements which gives the Hawaiian Sugar Trust an annual gratuity of $3,000,000 was to be continued in connection with the gratuity yesterday voted to the American trust, which amounted to not less than $5,000,000 a year, it would be utterly impossible to defend the course of the Republican party.

There were frequent references in the Republican caucus of the Senate today to the probability of a new treaty annexation of Hawaii, and i seemed to be quite generally under-stood that such a treaty was included among the possibilities for the near

REFERRED TO A FUTURE CAU-

WASHINGTON, June 12.—The Republican caucus, after considering the Hawaiian reciprocity provision for an hour at its second session, decided to refer the matter, together with vari-ous propositions which had been sub-mitted, to the Republican members of the Committee on Finance to form-ulate a proposition which shall be sub-mitted to a future caucus, if not sat-isfactory to all.

Allen of Nebraska (Pop.) introduced a resolution upon which he said the provision might be made applicable to other articles. The proposition will be perfected between this time and next Monday night, when another caucus will be held for its consideration.

A number of brief speeches were made on the various propositions relating to the Hawaiian treaty, and a proposition was submitted by Senator Thurston as follows: "Nothing herein contained shall be construed so as to abrogate or in any manner impair or affect the provisions of the treaty of commercial reciprocity concluded between the United States and the King of the Hawaiian Islands on the 30th day of June, 1875, or the provisions of any action Congress has heretofore passed for the said treaty remains in force and effect. The President of the United States is hereby authorized, in his discretion, to give due notice, as provided in said treaty, of the desire and election of the said treaty shall be hereafter modified or superseded by a ney treaty, then and thereafter all the provisions of such modified or new treaty, then and thereafter all the provisions of such modified or new treaty, when any the provisions of such modified or new treaty, when any there are the same in accordance with the provisions of this act shall be subject to the provisions of such modified or new treaty.

The vest of Missouri took the floor and called upon the majority to answer the declarations made by the other side in the widows of provisions of the treaty of the desire and election of the Hawaiian Islands on the 30th day of June, 1875, or the provisions of any action Congress has heretofore passed by the such same in accordance with the provision of the United States is hereby authorized, in his discretion, to give due notice, as provided in said treaty, provided that in the said treaty shall be hereafter modified or s

MINISTER HATCH MAKING HAY. MINISTER HATCH MAKING HAY.
WASHINGTON, June 12.—Mr. Hatch, Hawaiian Minister to the United States, called at the State Department this afternoon and spent half an hour in close consultation with Assistant Secretary Day. They said upon coming away that their business was unimportant, but declined to state its nature. All that could be gathered from the State Department was that the visit had no reference to the trouble that Hawaii was experiencing in the effort to control the entry and colonization of Japanese laborers. As it is well known, however, that the Hawailan representatives are losing no opportunity to impress upon Congress-men and other public men the necessity of speedy action in the direction of annexation of the islands, lest the change be lost to the United States, it is probable that the Minister profited by the visit to Judge Day to make some representations in the case, and perhaps made suggestions for a treaty.

upon and that was defeated.
When the Senate adjourned the amendment of Mr. Lindsay of Kentucky to strike out the differential on refined sugar was pending.
The Senate listened to a speech by Senator Vest of Missouri, arraigning the sugar schedule and saying that speculators in sugar stock understood the value of the schedule to the trust, if Republican Senators did not.

f Republican Senators did not. Mr. McEncry of Louisiana, who voted Mr. McEnery of Louisiana, who voted against the Democratic party on many tariff schedules, made a long and strong speech in defense of his position and in favor of protection. He advocated the sugar schedule as recessary to the producers, and asserted that under it America, before many years, would produce all its own sugar and some for export.

It soon became apparent that a complete understanding on this question was almost out of the question among so many, and it was decided, upon this account, to refer the entire matter to the Finance Committee, with the understanding that if its recommendations should not be satisfactory, the provision should be presented to the caucus when formulated.

The schedule, he insisted, was utterly indefensible. The only excuse he had heard advanced was that of Senator Allen that the duty was imposed not for revenue, but to encourage the beetgar industry.
"Oh, Mr. President," cried Mr. Vest

in conclusion, "our experts may be mistaken; we may be in the fog ring-ing our bells, but I repeat again what I said the other day, that there was mistaken: we may be in the fog ringing our bells, but I repeat again what I said the other day, that there was one set of men in this country who were not mistaken. Our friends in Wall street know what this schedule means," he said, his voice rising. "Within four hours after this schedule was reported, sugar stock went up $6 a share, from 118 to 124. Last night it clesed at 1254. Does anybedy believe that Wall street does not know what protection this schedule gives to the trust?"

Mr. McEnery of Louisiana (Dem., who yesterday voted for the sugar schedule, frilewed Mr. Vest. He argued that the interests of the sugar producers went hand in hand with those of the Sugar Trust. The interests of both were bound up together. If the differential on refined sugar was not maintained, a blow would be struck at the producer and every big factory would be idle.

Spanish Ministers Are Skeptical as to the President's Intentions.

NEW YORK, June 12.—A special to the Journal from Madrid says:
"There is much comment here over the published statement that President McKinley will send a note to Spain, in which he will not only demand money indemnity, but 'international satisfaction' for the treatment accorded Americans in Cuba, the object being to frighten Spain into accepting intervention. The ministers say they know nothing about it, that the Washington government has made no formal claim but has merely presented and recommended claims of self-called American citizens. Spain has replied to each claim, declaring that all were unfounded. The American governunfounded. The American ment has always answered, hol aaffir in suspense until it suited it

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS WIRE.] NEW YORK, June 12 .- There was an atmosphere of anxiety pervading the general council of the Reformed Epis-copal Church this morning. What the outcome of the council's action will be— whether it will injure the church or whether it will injure the church or not—was discussed.

Treasurer Heim in reading the report of the Finance Committee, called attention to the church's need of money and announced that it ought to malifiain the regular reserve in the church treasury. The amounts annually given to small churches would have to be reduced to $100. The salaries of some of the old bishops were temporarily reduced.

The early part of the morning session was devoted to reports on missionary work.

The constitution matter came up in the afternoon session, when it was reported by the Committee on Canons and Constitution, it would be unable to report on the amendments, and it was decided to make them a special order of business for Monday.

The general council will be held on the third Wednesday of May, 1800, at Baltimore.

A resolution was adopted declaring that the sentiment that had gained ground amnog the people that the Christian religion is not the only exclusive and imperial religion for all the races of men, but is only one among religions, be declared contrary to the teachings of God.

DISSOLVES THE NATIONAL DE-FENSE ASSOCIATION.

The Emperor Will Himself Attemp to Reform the Secret Political Police-Ambassador White Received.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS WIRE.] BERLIN, June 12.-[Special Berlin Cable Letter.] Since the arrival here of Admiral Tirpitz, chief of the Navy De-partment, Emperor William's plans to increase the strength of the German navy have been taken up in earnest. Admiral Tirpitz is recognized to be the boldest and most energetic man in the navy. He is popularly known as the naval Moltke, and his ideas and alms respecting the further development and reorganization of the navy are in thor-ough accord with those of Emperor William, who hopes that Admiral Tirpitz will succeed where Admiral Von Hollman failed, in inducing the Reichstag to adopt big naval credits. ... Emperor intends to have ten big ir clads and sixteen cruisers built by 1900 Considerable comment has aroused by the fact that the Empero has ordered the German shipbuilding yard to build the very cruisers which have been rejected by the Reichstag. Admiral Tirpitz is now making a tour of inspection of the navy-yards.

Great amazement has been caused by the fact that the Emperor, in a Cabinet order, has dissolved the national defense commission, an important military body created thirty years ago by his grandfather, and of whch Field Marshal Von Moltke was the head until his death. He was succeeded by Prince Albrecht of Prussla. His Majesty's motive was supposed to be to get rid of the irksome control of his plans for the new fortifications, or his alteration of the existing ones, which required un-til recently, the decision of the com-mission

It is now said that Emperor William imself desires to reform the secret solitical police and change the system f intercourse between the Cabinet minsters and the press. This may be due to the fact that the revelations of the to the fact that the revelations of the Von Tausch trial are still being busily discussed, and the National Liberals have decided to question the government in the Diet on the steps which it is intended to take to improve the police system. It also appears that Von Tausch is not yet out of danger. It is fairly certan that he will be tried for treason respecting his report in the utterances about the Emperor's health. Emperor William has nad an iron cottage erected in the garden of the garrison hospital at Heligoland, which he will inhabit during his stay on that island. The building is thirty yards long by fifteen yards wide and consists of a study, bed chamber, bathroom and servants' rooms. There is a small closed veranda outside.

A FIGHT OVER JOSEPH RICHARD SON'S WEALTH BEGUN

Children are not Satisfied With Nineteen Million Dollars Apiece, So They Sue for the Widow's Portion of the Estate.

IBY THE TIMES' SPECIAL WIRE. NEW YORK, June 12 .- [Special Dispatch.] The thirty-million-dollar estate of Joseph Richardson, an eccer tric millionaire, whose funeral took place Friday, will be divided only after This promises one of the a contest. most notable fights over an estate or record in the American courts.

The two children of the millionaire, through their lawyers, today offered for probate a will made by Joseph Richardson on October 29, 1894. Another will dated April 24, 1897, was read in the presence of the beneficiaries Friday evening, at the Spite House, in which Richardson died. The latter will is to be offered for probate Monday by the attorneys for Mrs. Richardson.

In the 1894 will, Richardson made no provision for his wife. His son, George Richardson of Bridgeport, Ct., and his daughter, Miss Della Richardson, are given the entire estate. By the last will, each of the children is given onethird of the estate, after two small bequests are paid, while the widow is given the other third. The legacy of $19,000,000 each from their father seems $1:4834. to have proven disappointing to George and Della Richardson, and they will endeavor, through the courts, to ob-tian $5,000,000 more, each. The result can only be a will contest, compared with which nearly every other contest in the history of American courts will seem insignaficant. The grounds on which the testator's children will make their contest have not yet been made

LABOUCHERE ATTACKS SALIS-BURY'S FOREIGN POLICY.

rmistice Between Greece and Turkey Broken by Turks Mobilizing Re-enforcements and Building Forts in the Neutral Zone.

IBY ASSOCIATED PRESS WIRE.

LONDON, June 12.—[By Atlantic Ca-ble.] Henry Labouchere in the course of a long address tonight at a meeting of the Twickeham Liberal Radical As sociation, of which he is president, violently attacked the foreign policy of Lord Salisbury, saying that England might as well guarantee the integrity of hell and the dominions of the devil as of the Turkish empire. The action of the government abroad, he declared, had disgraced every Englishman, and the country was suffering from an orgie of Toryism.

Forfeited Concessions. Porfeited Concessions.

NEW YORK, June 12.—The Journal, and Advertiser says: The Mexican government, by the executive action of President Diaz, having forfeited all the railway concessions held by the Mexican National Construction Company, at the office of the company in this city John Pratt, the secretary, said in an interview: "The concessions which have been forfeited were for lines of road which have not been built within the time allotted under the terms of the grant. The construction company now time allotted under the terms of the grant. The construction company now owns and operates a road between the port of Manzanillo, on the Pacific coast of Mexico, and Colima, the capital of the State of Colima. It also owns a piece of road near Zacatecas, in the State of that name. Concessions were given for a road connecting these two bits of track and for another branch line. As they were never built, the grants expire by limitation."

Suicide at Church

NEW YORK, June 12.—While services were being held in Calvary Church this afternoon, an unknown woman walked into the vestibule and killed herself by firing a bullet into her right temple. CHURCH ARMY REPUDIATED. Dr. Hadly's Scheme of Evangeliza-

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS WIRE.] NEW YORK, June 12 .- The Parochial Mission Society of the Protestant Epis-copal church will formally withdraw its support from the church army September 28 next. This decision, which was arrived at at the regular meeting of the Executive Committee, amounts practically to a complete repudiation of Dr. Henry H. Hadly and his scheme of evangelization. It was not entirely unevangelization. It was not entirely unlooked for, however, because the church army, since its organization a year ago, has existed only on sufferance, and no rector in this diocese has been found willing to indorse the work. In fact, it has been on trial and has not found favor with the great majority of the clergy. It was placed on trial only through the efforts of Dr. Hadley, vicar of St. Agnes's, who is said to have now changed his mind about its usefulness.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS WIRE.]
SAN DIEGO, June 12.—The supposed suicide of H. K. Rogers, formerly pur-ser of the steamer Corona, has occa-sioned not a little comment among people here who were well acquainted with him. From them some facts have been learned which throw new light on the affair, but does not clear away the mystery. In the first place, Rogers had left the steamship company's service some time ago on account of extra duties imposed on him. Just before ment, but had not succeeded. It is stated, too, that he had private troubles which preyed upon his mind.

Some doubt is expressed as to whether he committed suicide. It is stated by those in a position to know that he could have left the Santa Rosa at Port Harford without being observed. The steamer was there four hours and he had ample opportunity to slip away. The theory has been advanced that he disguised himself and left the vessel at that place.

SAN JOSE, June 12.—Moses Mandel-son Myers, a San Francisco piano player, was arrested here today by Detective Crockett of San Francisco, for the theft of jewelry from the room of Mrs. Sadle Rodgers. Part of the booty was recovered in pawnshops. He was taken back to San Francisco this aftertaken back to San Francisco this afternoon. The complaining witness accuses him of robbing her of jewelry worth $500. Myers, who was formerly a resident of Fresno, cut a wide swath here.
At a local restaurant he is credited with spending $200 for champagne in a few hours. He distributed part of the jewelry as presents among new-found friends who caught his fancy.

CALIFORNIA MINERS. Will Be Represented at Salt Lake and Denver.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS WIRE.)

SAN FRANCISCO, June 12.-The Ex-SAN FRANCISCO, June 12.—The Executive Committee of the California Miners' Association has selected the following delegates to the Transmississippi Congress which meets at Sait Lake July 17: Tirey L. Ford, H. E. Pickett, J. G. Mather, Dan T. Cole, J. J. Crawford, Louis Glass, Samuel W. Cheyney, Mark B. Kerr, Julian Sonniag and W. S. Keyes. It was decided that Tirey L. Ford, J. G. Mather, H. E. Pickett, Samuel W. Cheyney and one other delegate yet to be named should represent the association at the Denver convention. They will return to Sait Lake for the session of the Transmississippi Congress. After some discussion a committee was appointed to confer with a similar committee to be appointed by the people of the Sacramento Valley, and both committees will then call upon the Debris Commission, appointed under the act of the last Legislature, to urge upon the commission and the Governor the letting of a contract for the immediate building of a dredger for the Sacramento River, for which the last Legislature made an appropriation of $300,000.

Howles flatly denies that he engaged the attorney as claimed. He does not remember telling members of the Legislature that he and McNear has proplature that he and McNear has property worth millions of dollars that was jeopardized by the old act governing franchises. He does not remember telling Assemblymen Leavitt and North that legislative relief was necessary to save the company thousands of dollars. He positively declares that his only interest in speaking to Frick was to find out where the Meade Bill stood on the file. When asked if he had employed Frick to do any other work there was an objection from his counsel and he declined under advice to answer the question.

We Indians Left an Old Man Weltering in Gore. [BY ASSOCIATED PRESS WIRE.] TACOMA (Wash.) June 12.—A Ledger special from Olympia says that Napoleon Legarde, aged 70, was nearly murdered by two Indians in his cabin at Sherlock, Thurston county. His as-sailants were George and John Wil-liams. While one held Legarde, the other beat him over the head with a rifle barrel. John Williams stabbed Le-rifle barrel. John Williams stabbed Liegarde in the back and he was left in a pool of his own blood for dead. The Indians evidently intended murder. A deputy sheriff went to Sherlock and found the two Indians. George Williams resisted arrest and was shot three times before he gave up. The Indians under arrest are bad men. George Williams killed another Indian three years ago and was sentenced to twelve years in prison. After serving two years he was pardoned.

Fisk's Son Brings Action Against the Usurer's Estate,
[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS WIRE.]
AN FRANCISCO, June 12.—Asa W.

Fisk of Boston, son of the late noted money-lender of this city, by a former marriage, today brought action in the courts to have his father's estate held in trust until certain claims, amount ing to $1,099,064, which he is prepared to make, have been settled. Fisk says that when his father left Boston in the early days to come to California, he took with him the claimant's savings, amounting to $187.50, and that formed the basis of the money-lender's fortune, and that it was agreed the money should be invested in the son's favor. The latter claims that this money loaned out at the rate of interest usually charged by his deceased father, would now amount to $954,368. He makes a further claim against the estate for $144,896, which he says his father lost by injudicious investment in Tacoma, Wash, lands. The claimant was cut off in his father's will, hence the action. ing to $1,099,064, which he is prepared

LONDON CABLE LETTER. Liberals Dissatisfied With the Jubilee Programme.
[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS WIRE.]

LONDON, June 12.- [By Atlantic ole. Associated Press Copyright, 1897.] The past week has seen the arrival of numerous military detachments from the colonies to take part in the Queen's jubilee festivities. The official programme of the procession, as published has given umbrage to the Liberals. owing to the utter absence of recogni-tion of the civil and industrial side of tion of the civil and industrial side of the Queen's reign.

The Daily Chronicle is very outspoken on this subject, especially at the omit-ting of the Speaker of the House of Commons and of Mr. Gladstone, and asks: "What kind of a show is it that gives a prominent place to the soldiers of Emperor William and to the repre-sentatives of Turkish barbarism, and excludes the greatest living English-speaking statesman of the age?"

an especially bedraggled appearance, with the soaked half-finished jubilee decorations everywhere. On Friday, however, there was a pleasant change to hot, bright weather. The changes of temperature have been very trying to American visitors, who are already filling the hotels.

The season, as a whole, has been a remarkably poor one, the house agents especially echo the complaint of poor business, saying there was never less demand for furnished houses. The fact is that the exorbitant prices charged for everything is keeping many thousands away. Lodging-house keepers, in many instances, have been guilty of the sharpest practices, and calmiy announce double prices for the fortnight including the jubilee to visitors who two months ago engaged rooms at a certain figure. As a fine example of the price of carriages, one of the biggest to Piccadilly and return, a distance of less than two miles, and they say they will not guarantee to reach any particular sbot.

QUEEN'S SYMPATHY FOR IRE-LAND.

According to an "absolutely unim-peachable authority," a writer in the Westminster Gazette relates how the Irish song, "The Wearing of the Green, was very recently sung at Windsor was very recently sung at windsor Castle. The Queen, it appears, requested a young Irish lady, who was visiting the castle, to sing an Irish song. She went to the piano and sung "The Wearing of the Green," and, according to the story told, Her Majesty was so touched by the pathos of the song she burst into tears.

The writer continues: "Ah." said my eminent informant, "you little know the depth of the Queen's sympathy for the Irish and the tenderness of her heart."

Great satisfaction is expressed in Great Britain on the announcement that the Queen has commanded William Q. Orchardson, R.A., who was elected a royal academican nearly twenty years ago, to paint a jubilee picture of herself, the Prince of Wales, the Duke of York and little Prince Edward.

"WE SELL THE EARTH."

BASSETT & SMITH.

POMONA.

Reader, has there been doubts in your mind about the orange industry paying:

It is an easy matter to hear complaints all through the country of orchards mortaged and owners despondent, but, say, let us give you a few pointers. Go where you will, if it is in a good orange district, if you find an orchard that is well cared for, where the trees are true to name, with a good water right, and you will find that orchard has paid and the owner well satisfied and setting out more trees. The great trouble is there are thousands of acres set to oranges and lemons that should never have been set to citrus fruits, on account of scarcity of water and too cold and frosty, but people do not find it out till their oranges commence to bear. We predict that one-quarier to one-third of the acreage now set to citrus fruits will be dug up within the next 5 years.

Let us tell you of the gilt-edged orchards that are paying and will pay in the future. For instance, there is a 40-acre tract lying between Pomona and Claremont, 22 acres in oranges, 5 acres lemons, 10 acres prunes, 3 acres apricots, good water right. Last year the prunes were too young to bear, but the income from the 30 acres was $4000, and yet it is but a young orchard and will increase each year. This is the best 40-acre tract in the valley; price $$2,000.

The best 10 acres (we believe we can say this without fear of we believe we can say this without fear of contradiction) in Calitract in the valley; price $32,000.

—AGAIN—

The best 10 acres (we believe we can say this without fear of contradiction) in California lies about 5½ miles northwest of Pomons. It was planted on March 12 and 14 of 1890. The income for the past 5 years has been as follows: $30, 853, $4780, $2384, $4900. We do not believe there is anything in the State that can equal this, and we also believe that all conditions are perfect for citrus growing at this placesoil, water, climate, free from frost, etc. This, in connection with 35 acres more, about 17 acres in all set to fruit, with extra water-right and two small houses, with all tools, horses, cows, etc., etc., can be bought for $25,000.

—ONCE MORE—

Northeast of Covina we have a fine orchard home. There are 20 acres, 10 acres solid to Washington Navel oranges (mostly a few late Valencias;) 10 acres solid to Washington Navel oranges (mostly a few late Valencias;) 10 acres solid to Eureka lemons, all in bearing; a model or Towns, a measuritud home; 2-story house, 7 rooms, a measuritud to sell has the mining fever and is bound to sell price has been will discount this price.

—AND LAST BUT NOT LEAST—
We have a beautiful California home located between Pomona and Ciaremont (the college town) set to oranges, lemons, olives and prunes; nice 7-room house, cement cellar, curb, sidewalks, etc., etc., only $4500; very casy terms if desired, Now reader these are gilt-edged properties and are sure and good values. If you would like to look them over we would be glad to hitch up the "insects" and show you some of Pomona's gilt-edged property.

Broadway is a wide, beautiful street, abounding in beautiful buildings. Shoppers love to trade on it. There is pleasure in promenading on it. The sidewalks are 17 feet wide and of a superior kind.

Business property on Broadway is the surest and safest investment any person can make. There is still here and there a piece that can be picked up at a bargain. S. K. Lindley has three such—one between Third and Fourth, one between Fifth and Sixth, and a third between Sixth and Seventh. But see him soon if you think you'd like to secure one of them. His office is No. 106 S. BROADWAY. 13

"A photograph of the articles taken by A photograph of the articles taken by George H. Tilley, a responsible pho-tographer, later in the day, revealed the following outlay: One four-bladed knife three and one-half inches long; one two-bladed knife four inches long; three other knife blades ranging from one to three inches in length; thirty-eight eight and ten-penny nails and spikes; thirty-four sixpenny wire nails sharp-pointed; twenty-six shingle nails; sixteen carpet tacks; three large screws; one horseshoe nail; one barbed-wire staple; three ounces of fine glass. Whallen claims to have traveled around the country for the past seventeen years eating glass and other hard substances in his avocation as the human ostrich. Up to within two weeks ago his peculiar diet had agreed with him perfectly. It is believed he will recover from the operation.

BICYCLES IN THE ARMY.

Twenty-four Soldiers Start on Long-distance Ride.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS WIRE.] ST. LOUIS (Mo.,) June 12.-A spe cial to the Republic from Fort Mis-souri, Mont., says: "Today twenty-four men will start to ride nearly 2500 miles to Jefferson Barracks, Mo., which will be reached in about six veeks. Whether bicycles will be used in the army depends on the result of the experiments. Full infantry equip-ment, including cooking utensils and ment, including cooking utensils and shelter tents, will be carried on the wheels. Each member of the party will wear the regular field service uniform with the exception of bicycle shoes. Ten of the men will carry their Krag-Jorgenson rifles, slung to their machines under the left leg and parallel to the top tubing of the frame. The rest of the party will wear pistols, all being supplied with fifty rounds of ammunition to the man, with twenty-five additional rounds each in their knapsacks."

A PERFECT SUCCESS Torpedo Boat Porter Put Through Satisfactory Tests.

NEW YORK, June 12.—The final trial trip of the torpedo boat Porter has been made and the little flyer proved itself a success in every way. The trial trip was made in the horseshoe in Sandy Hook and consisted of working the torque tubes and firing The trial trip was made in the horse-shoe in Sandy Hook and consisted of working the torpedo tubes and firing torpedoes. When off Sandy Hook the "tactical diameter" of the vessel was stried; that is, the vessel was started at a seventeen-knot speed and it was turned. The vessel made a complete circle in 1100 feet. The test was thoroughly satisfactory to the board. The vessel was next taken into deep water and driven ahead under full steam. The order was then given to reverse the engines to ascertain how quickly the boat would answer them. It was found that under full steam the vessel began to back within half its own length, and when the engines were started back again at full speed the vessel started head at one-quarter its own length. This ended the trial of speed and the working of its engines. The steam and hand-steering apparatus were then put through the various tests, and, like the other part of the machinery, proved successful.

The vessel was then taken back to the horseshee and the firing of the torpedoes was begun. One of the small boats was anchored as a target and three torpedoes were discharged at it. All came to the surface near the boat. The test lasted four hours, and was one of the most severe that any of the smaller vessels of the navy has been subjected to.

Commodore Dewey and the rest of the board expressed themselves as entirely satisfied with the boat in every respect.

ben Walker and a member of the deputation from the Progressive Democratic Club, Mr. Bryan was driven to the Bartholdi Hotel.

Mr. Bryan arrived at the hotel about 4 o'clock, and was greeted by a large concourse of people. Within ten minutes the demand for a speech became so persistent that he had to respond briefly. He dwelt upon the duties of citizenship, and said that he looked back on the campaign of last year as one of great value to the American people.

"One cannot always judge of the effect of a campaign at once," he said, "and we do not know whether the result of the campaign will remain permanent or not."

fect of a campaign at once," he said, "and we do not know whether the result of the campaign will remain permanent or not."

Of one thing he was sure, and that was that it was a good thing to have the citizens of a country keep their public officials under close scrutiny. In that direction the campaign of last year had been prolific in good results.

Mr. Bryan avoided the discussion of both local and national politics, but he did say that so far as he was able to judge from what he had heard, the predicted return of prosperity had not come. He thought the prospects for Democratic success next fall were very good, and that there had been a growth of silver sentiment here and elsewhere.

Mr. Bryan will go by rail to Washington, and thence by boat to Norfolk, Va., where he is to speak on Monday under the auspices of the Chautauqua Club. On Tuesday he will be at Charlottesville and deliver the commencement address before the Washington and Jefferson societies of the University of Virginia.

On his way west he is to speak at Carthage, Mo.; Ottawa, Kan., and Beatrice, Neb. He is to be at his home in Lincoln on June 27, but two days later he will push on for the far West. On July 5 he will deliver an address before the Silver Republican Club at Los Angeles, and on the 7th he will speak at San Francisco. He will go through Ogden and on July 15 he is to be at Salt Lake City to attend the convention of the Transmississippi Congress, of which he is president.

Mrs. Bryan will join him at Salt Lake and the whole family will spend a vacation of a few weeks in Yellowstone Park.

Mr. Bryan left at 11:25 o'clock on the Pennsylvania Railway.

Boys Find a Woman's Head Buried in a Cellar.
[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS WIRE.] RUSHVILLE (Ind.,) June 12.—The discovery of a woman's head burled in earth in a cellar of a vacant house in the center of the city has aroused intense excitement. Two boys were in tense excitement. Two boys were in the cellar rumaging among some old barrels and boxes when they made the discovery. The head is that of a woman probably 35 or 40 years old. The flesh has decayed, leaving the woman probably 35 or 40 years old.

The flesh has decayed, leaving the skin hard and dry and pressing tightly against the skull. There are thirteen teeth, six upper and seven lower, looking as bright and natural as if their owner was alive. A mass of short, heavy blonde hair covers the head with bangs in front. The facial appearance gives rise to the belief that the owner of the head in her lifetime possessed great beauty. A long cut or incision in the skull over the right ear tells how the woman met her fate.

The discovery of the head has given rise to all manner of conjectures as to the woman's identity, who buried the head and how it got there. The prevailing opinion is that the woman was murdered, her body buried elsewhere and the head buried in the cellar.

Many believe that the head is that of Pearl Bryan, murdered at Fort Thomas, Ky., by Scott Jackson and Alonzo Walling. This woman has been dead three or four years, while Pearl Bryan met her fate but a year and a half ago, which explodes that theory.

"Faust Up to Date" was seen last aight in all its glory of ted fire and tinselled gause, but "Faust Before Date' came the night before, when the tinsel was somewhat scrappy, and the red fire lay solely in the language used by managers and ballet masters at sundry trying crises in the preliminary performance.

mime show of his own. After expressing his opinion of the whole thing in a wheeze that was more than energetic, he strode out on the platform, went to church with a plous and abstracted demeanor suggestive of inward visions of his future harp and halo, turned suddenly into an ardent and romantic Faust, struck dumb by the sight of Marguerite, and then became a beautiful, stout gray devil, suggesting boundless depths of jnquity for the imitation of his scarlet prototype. Then he backed off to the water's edge and beamed through his spectacles on the disgruntled populace as it tried it all over again in just the same old way.

Marguerite, too, was a fruitful source of wrath. That gentle maiden insisted on stalking aeroes the stage with a Lady Macbeth stride, while Dame Martha waddled at her heels like a Muscovy duck. Mr. Ruckley remonstrated vigorously but vainly, Marguerite merely tossed her head and became more wooden than ever, while Martha clung desperately to the toto which she had evidently evolved all alone as the highest pantonimic expression of her part. Marguerite had aeted before, and was afflicted with that modicum of knowledge which is a particularly dangerous thing on the stage. She absolutely refused to follow directions, and at the sixth trial her galt and manner were so remarkable that Manager Leavitt's promoted to active warfare by this criticism.

Kiralfy and Constantine had a turn that was made particularly impressive by the loose tweed pantaloons that rippled around their active legs, and the each had a solo. Constantine spun and drifted about with bland unconsciousness of his shirt sleeves and stocking feet, and Kiraify brought cheers even from the German populace with his famous dragon dance, tying himself into bowknots as easily as though he were adorned with the familiar green scales instead of a particularly baggy suit of ordinary clothes.

The cheers of the German populace were not always so spontaneously given. It was part of the duty of that populace to cheer, thus giving the keynote of applause for each feat of skill or daring, but it was so saving of lung power that it had frequently to be admonished by Mr. Buckley to "yell up there now. Just keep a-hollerin', can't you?"

were his pupils, while Constantine jammed his hat down on his head and gazed abstractedly across the lake.

"I'm always good to the girls," went on Kiralfy, genially. "They know I mean business and they work hard. It doesn't pay to speak cross to them. Now, once more, ladies. This is fine. Stretch out there a little more, my children. Oh, hell: not that way. Don't you know anything at all. Its the easiest step in the world.

As the limber Kiralfian leg shot skyward in active illustration of the easiest step in the world. Constantine observed discontentedly: "It looks just rotten when you break the line." Before Kiralfy could retort, a shrill voice from the rear ranks demanded: "Who's bossin' this job, anyhow?" Everybody laughed, and Mr. Buckley, recognizing the justice of the appeal, straightened things out and started them off again. So it went on. Faust and Valentine "fit and bled and died." Valentine was carried off by his sympathetic comrades, and then the irrepressible Kiralfy essayed to show Faust how to rouse of jabbing his opponent's eyes out. They were still fencing when Mr. Buckley shouted: "Watch out now for your brakes and lights. Minute you see that tower fall start a-yeilin' and run up and down."

The populace obeyed to the letter, and dodged wildly about, rending the skies with shrieks as the tower toppled and fell, revealing four cheerful devils, two short-walsted skeletons and an owl that flapped his winsy. Red fire was too expensice for a rehearsal, so was the dasgon, but the rest of it was all there and the spirit of the performers was willing to the last degree. All mistakes and disagreements were forgotten, and everybody prophesied a brilliant success and unlimited shekels for the show.

HOUGH society's ranks are sufday witnesses fresh departures the gentle round of festivities continues and seems likely so to do for the next two or three weeks. Last week's list of events included the entertainment of the Monday Musical Club by Mrs. Modini-Wood, Mrs. Frank B. Pressia's luncheon on the same day, Mrs. W. R. Jones's card party on Tuesday afternoon, the Davidson-Perry and Berger Marygold weddings, and Miss Van Dyke's card party on Wednesday. On Thursday, there were two large whist parties at the residence of Maj. and Mrs. Bonsall, Mrs. D. E. Wellcome of Boyle Heights entertained at cards in the afternoon, and the Misses Howes in the evening. Mrs. de Pauw enter-tained at luncheon, Mrs. G. A. David-son entertained the Mills Ciub, and Mrs. D. K. Edwards the Russin Art Club, at their last meetings of the sea-son. The Jonathan Club reception on Friday evening was a brilliant and largely-attended affair, at which a delightful musical programme was fol-lowed by a supper and dancing.

Miss Louise McFarland entertained from 4 to 6 o'clock yesterday afternoon, in honor of Miss Harmon Spruance, who will leave for the East on Thursday. Croquet on the lawn was followed by a luncheon indoors, at which the table was charmingly decorated in green and white, the colors of the Marlborough senior class. A large bowl of Easter illies formed the centerpiece, while at diagonally opposite corners were large bows of green and white satin ribbons. Miss Florence Silent poured the chocolate and Miss Frances Cochran presided over the sherbet. The other rooms were effectively decorated with La France roses and coreopsis. The guests, besides those already mentioned, were: Misses—Suranne Gay, Louise Bourke, Miss Spears, who was in charge of the refreshment tables, was assisted by the Misses Caryl Sippy, Belle Harden, Katherine Kemper, Josephine Crank, Belle Coulter, Lelia Simonds, Juana Creighton and the primary department. The kindergarten children, who assisted as flower girls, were Marjory Adair, Marie McCoy and Ellen Taggart. Arend's Orchestra rendered selections during the afternoon.

The current events section of the Ebell Society closed its year's work Thursday morning with a Spanish breakfast at Gutierrez. The floral decorations were in the Spanish red and yellow, and the menu cards were in red, topped by an appropriate quotation. The place-cards were in-blue, each one bearing besides the name, an apt descriptive quotation from the old dramatists. Cuban buttons, and the red, white and blue ribbons of liberty held the cards together. The ladies discussed the Cuban question thoughtfully, and brightly from the sub-topics: "A Glimpse of Cuba in Peace." "Cuba in War Times," "Attitude of the United States in Former and in the Present Revolt." Miss Yaw, who has a weakness for small boys, was disappointed when she earned that seating-room in the Los Angeles Theater on the night of the concert was too valuable to allow an invitation to be given the newsboys. Richer people would pay good round dollars to hear Miss Yaw sing, and those dollars mean the much-needed new wing, playground and gymnasium at the home, a much more valuable and lasting benefit to the active youngsters than the pleasure of an hour at the

A commmencement reception was given Friday evening by Miss Orton for the pupils of her school. The house was decorated with sweet peas, carnations and roses. The Misses Orton were assisted in receiving by Misses Young, Pierret, Morrison and Roth, and by Dr. and Mrs. Hull. Miss Tileston and Mrs. Baker, assisted by Miss Merwin, presided over the refreshments. Among the Pasadena people present were:

As it turned out, though, the boys had the songs, as well as the promise of many improvements. Active preparations were in progress all the morning, for every manjack was weighted with the dignity and responsibility of giving a proper reception to "the high singer." Faces were scrubbed until they shone, and clean shirts were in active demand. A dainty cluster of sweet peas was laid out in state on the dining-room table, ready for presentation to Miss Yaw, and was visited at intervals by delegations of boys, who speculated on the probable awfulness of the presentation ceremonies. Other delegations kept a keen watch from the front door, in case she might ness of the presentation ceremonies. Other delegations kept a keen watch from the front door, in case she might arrive unexpectedly, and as time wore on, the older boys were selzed with such an accession of bashfulness that they took to disappearing around corners, and suddenly bobbing up again with loftv announcements that they were quite indifferent to the charms of music, and didn't care to come in. The small boys stood manfully by their guns, and frankly owned up that they wanted to hear "the high singer," besieging patient Miss Housel with speculations and inquiries as to whether she shosed the lady would sing for them "jes" as high 's she kin." While the suppositions were at their height, the singer came. When the carriage drove up there was not a boy in sight. Every last one had fied in spasms of bashfulness to the safe shelter of doors and curtains. They emerged one by one, as they saw opportunities to do so unobtrusively, and brought up the tail of the procession as Miss Yaw was shown over the house and told the story of its evolution from the little reading-room on Third street to the present comfortable home.

The chief need just now is for more furniture and more room. There are beds only for twenty-two boys, and every bed is filled. The furnishings are plain, but exquisitely neat and clean, and the house is just planned for boys to have a good time. There is one serious drawback. The reading-room is much too small and too scantily furnished with books. It is the only Emil Kayser,

Miss Newton of South Pasadena entertained at progressive hearts Thursday afternoon, Miss Hurlbut being the guest of honor. The house was decorated with red geraniums. Miss Hurlbut assisted Miss Newton in receiving the guests. Seven tables were arranged and prizes were won by Mrs. Bichowsky, Mrs. H. J. Macomber and Mrs. Hiram Staats. Those present were: for boys to have a good time. There is one serious drawback. The reading-room is much too small and too scantily furnished with books. It is the only playroom the boys have, and every wall of it shows the scars of battle. If only the new ground can be obtained, and the long-wished-for new wing added, there will be room enough and to spare for forty boys, instead of twenty, and for the gymnasium to boot. A natatorium is dreamed of, but that is the acme of bliss, only to be spoken of under the breath, and lying far in the future. If only the new wing can be added now, and the gymnasium before very long, forty happy boys will bless the name of Ellen Beach Yaw.

The youngsters had taken courage and were huddled together in the hall when Miss Yaw returned from her tour of inspection with the matron. She went into the little parlor and began to pull off her gloves, smiling down at the boys as she asked what boys liked to hear in the way of a song. Every boy smiled sheepishly, rubbed one bare foot against the other bare leg, and became suddenly absorbed in the pattern of the carpet.

They looked up with a start when Miss Yaw suddenly absorbed in the pattern of the carpet.

They looked up with a start when Miss Yaw suddenly broke into the gay laughing song from "Manon Lescaut," and straightway every boy forgot all his embarrassment. The French words were joy from the boys.

That was fun, and reminiscent snickers, mingled with the patter of small brown hands as they remembered their Grebie, Grebie, Barnes, Margaret Grebie, Grace Barnes, Margaret Grebie, Grace Barnes, Miss Daisy Polk gave a musicale Thursday evening in honor of Miss Harriet Sawyer of St. Louis. The Madrigal and Amphion quartettes rendered several selections. Miss Polk gave violin selections and Miss Sawyer played several piano solos.

Misses Elsie and Mabel and Master Eddle Shields entertained Saturday evening, the occasion being a joint birthday celebration. Over twenty little folks were present to help celebrate the event and admire the new bicycles given the youngsters by their parents. Friday was the twentieth anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Rice. In the evening a number of their friends gathered at their home on Brockton street and treated them to a surprise party.

Mrs. Elmer Cutting entertained the members of the Rebekah Lodge on Friday evening at her home on the corner of Eighth and High street, at whist.

A reception was tendered by the

were joy from the boys.
That was fun, and reminiscent snickers, mingled with the patter of small brown hands as they remembered their manners enough to applaud in the conventional way and ask for more. Miss Yaw has won world-wide fame with that beyond them, but the irresistible contagion of the music was something that the dullest could understand. Small chuckles and gurgles began to chime in with the lilting measures, and the bursts of musical laughter from the singer were echoed by shrieks of song, but it is safe to say that the merry spirit of it was never better understood and appreciated. The song ended, the singer stood and laughed with the boys, who choked themselves off abruptly as she announced that she was going to speak them a little piece. This time there was full understanding in the wriggle of appreciation which greeted the first words that told the story of "little orphant Annie" and her marvelous store of tales—wriggles that changed into shivers of terrified glee among the smallest ones at the ghostly warning: "The gobble-uns served.

The ladies of the Calvary Presbyterian Church gave "a white evening" entertainment Wednesday evening. The church parlors were decorated with white roses and other white flowers, and a short programme was rendered.

Miss Blanche McCormick entertained a number of friends at her home on her marvelous store of tales—wriggles that changed into shivers of terrified glee among the smallest ones at the ghostly warning: "The gobble-uns 'ull git you ef you—don't—watch—out!". Then a wail of utter woe was heard, and the giggles broke out afresh as the wonderful lady told yet another story of a much-abused little boy who "just bawled good" as he told his troubles to the world.

As soon as the laughter had subsided a little, Miss Yaw sat down by the plano, struck a few soft chords and began that sweetest and most pathetic of old songs. "Home, Sweet Home." The homeless little waifs clustered around the doorway were as still as mice, and every childish face was grave and sweet as the exquisite, tender notes floated through the rooms. The little fellows who had chuckled so giecfully over the laughing song rose in an instant to the beauty of the old song which holds the home love of all the world.

They were still quiet when Miss Yaw again smiled at them and said: "Now you shall have something high." In a trice the whole group was buzzing again with delight over the airy trills and "rippling, rollicking roulades" that fell from the singer's lips like cascades of diamonds. Higher and higher she soared, the boys fairly holding their breath as the silvery tones rolled out, and then, with a shower of trills that ended in a laugh, she asked: "Is that high enough? Now you do it." The bashful wriggles and chuckles were instantly in evidence at the very suggestion, but it was stored up all the same for future use.

They did sing with Miss Yaw, though, for she said she meant to sing "America" and needed help. There was much clearing of throats, which had suddenly become husky, and then the grand old hymn rang out, the clear tones of the great singer sustaining the stately melody, through all the mixed chirps of the boys, who struck in with sublime disregard of such trifles of time or tune.

This was all, for Miss Yaw had to go. The bunch of sweet peas was presented somehow, no one quite knew, but the boys saw with satisfaction that the lovely visitor was holding it in her left hand, while with the right she shook heartily each small paw that was stuck toward her as she went out.

"I am so sorry to go. May I come again? I like boys," she said, as she reached the front door, and one particularly self-possessed boy acted as spokesman for all the tongue-tied group, and said: "Yes, please come group, and said: "Yes, please again right away."

CONCERT PROGRAMME. Tomorrow night Miss Yaw sings to

THE HERO OF VELESTINO.

[At Velestino, long after the Greek line had retreated, a single rifleman kept his position and continued to fire until he fell dead from Turkish bullets.]

Along the hills behind him hung In fitful bursts the batteries' smoke From out whose clouds in thundering tongue The gods of war in anger spoke.

Behind him lay each wavering line Of patriots in their final stand, Whose glistening bayonets seemed to shine The bulwarks of their fatherland.

All day they fought, all day they fell, From morning dawn to setting sun; Nor could their Moslem formen tell A battle lost or battle won.

Just as the ocean's thundering swell Breaks o'er the rocks and sinks again, With murderous storms of shot and shell The Turks had charged, but charged in vain.

Around his gun old comrades lay, With pallid faces toward the sky, Whose shattered forms in grim array Told how a hero best can die.

When 'mid the battle's fearful strife, Enveloped in its baneful breath, He fights to guard his country's life, And then in dying smiles at death.

No thought had he of mortal dread, As up the hill his foemen pressed. Though from his wounds each blood-stain spread

Its gory sign across his breast.

All day his trusty gun he'd plied, With deadly import to the foe, Whose paynim blood had doubly dyed The hills and valleys far below.

He heard the order to retreat (From Constantine, in weak despair,)
Yet still, unyielding to defeat,
That gallant gunner battled there.

Back, back, the Grecian forces fell, Subservient to the coward's word: Still through those sounds of earthly hell His solitary gun was heard.

Leonidas might vainly try
To stem that furious Islam flood;
Or should he strive, could only die
Where that undaunted soldier stood.

That night at Velestino lay-Unwept, unhonored and unsung— A warrior who proclaimed that day The Spartan source from whence he sprun

Though lost his country, lost his cause, He could not live the tyrant's slave; And well may weeping Freedom pause Above that nameless hero's grave

The "SUNLIGHT COMPANY" is working under its own patents and is no infringement.

What the Philadelphia Times says:

"The Sunlight Lamp is said to be entirely superior to the Welsbach Light, as it gives a more natural color to objects and does not create the ghastly appearance that the Welsbach Light does. It is furthermore worthy of note that the Sunlight Gas Lamp mantle will last twice as long as any other, and that it will increase the light at one-half the cost for gas.'

The "Sunlight" Light is brilliant, mellow, and gives all objects in their natural color, resting instead of straining the eye.

When the young Englishman goes wrong, he either runs away himself to South Africa, or his family meet in council and bainsh him there. Formerly Australia was the popular resort of such exiles, but of late years it has been considered that the prodigal has a better chance to retrieve his reputation in the hands of the Kaffir than in that of the Maori. For it must be clearly comprehended, when one is a prodigal, a British prodigal, that one must not come back with a few old husks and peniltential tears, but with something more obviously indicative of a changed disposition and leaves hearts a heart of the same and seven with the backing of a large with the backing of a large with the water a heart of the same and the product of the same and the produc come back with a few old husks and penitential tears, but with something more obviously indicative of a changed

The exile departs under varied conditions. He may possess a £10 note beyond his summer fare; he may possess a few hundred pounds; he may be guaranteed a quarterly allowance on his promise to remain away from his respectable brothers and sisters. With the exception of the latter class, which is speedily wiped out by drink, the fate of the prodigals is almost always the same. Nine times out of ten they drift further and further away from self-respectfulness, and never acquire that will-o'-the-wisp they seek, a fortune But the object sought by the old folks at home has at least been gained. In burying themselves on the veldt, they have buried the past, the shame. Therefore, South Africa has been called "the grave of lost reputations."

The average prodigal thus banished is a peculiarly useless creature in a new land, because he is generally of respectable middle-class, frequently of aristocratic parentage. He, or his friends at home, never realize how helpless he is until a week or two helpless he is until a wee

Such quickly-moving troops, knowing the lay of the land, and backed up by volunteers from the veldt of Mashonaland and Matabelesland—every one of whom is, by force of circumstances, an expert shot and cavalryman,—could do more damage-in less they were under the scores I knew in these years, not continued the scores I knew in these years, not continued the scores I knew in these years, not alryman,—could do more damage-in less time to Boer of Kaffir than columns of heavily-equipped and slowly-moving soldiers from England. They would fight as the insurgents do in Cuba, as the Americans did in the Revolutionary War, facing the Boer with the Boer's methods, not forming up to be shot down in platoons at another Majuba Hill. It is doubtful if there is any need for anything like 20,000 troops to main tain British supremacy in Africa. The object in sending out so many is probably to menace Germany, but, as a matter of fact, the Germans would be a good deal lost campaigning in sich a good deal lost campaigning in sich a country. They have had absolutely no experience of wars where all Von

So quiet was everything that Mr. Rhodes, having occupled Mashonaland and signing a treaty with King Lobengula of the Matabeles, and having no trouble with President Kruger, disbanded his troops in the conquered country and these swarmed down to the gold fields and to Kimberley. They had money in their pockets, but, out of the scores I knew in these years, not one of them thought of going home. They were under promise, as it were, to bury their reputations and the interment was not finished. A wilder lot a more reckless, I never saw, even on the plains in America. The troopers I was chiefly mixed up with were gentlemen. I mean, of course, that they were mostly men of education, some of excellent birth and breeding. Every man had his own secret; the one shame which had wrecked his life, but there were among them no criminals, in the technical meaning of the word. When the full recognition of their position came to them, the fact that, as troopers, they were not wanted, that their money was spent, and that there was no employment for them, they buckled to in the most cheerily desperate way to tide over the hard times. None of them dreamed of writing home for assistance. They had, none of them, trades. The petty artifices of the swindler or the beggar were impossible to them. They were willing to annex a few hundred square miles of other people's country and be proud of the feat, but they would have been horrified at the idea of trespassing with evil intent on another man's backward. The shifts they made were piti-

There were five partners in the concern, and they found it impossible to turn a hungry man away because he had not the luck to have a shilling. As there were innumerable poor and hungry men in Johannesburg in the hard times, and they all "passed the word" to each other, the restaurant was not a success. The one great and permanent success achieved by any member of that hopeless band was made by "Joe," a rean who had been a London reporter. Joe read a chance paragraph in the Star stating that the mine-owners' association was-going to bring out a number, of skilled Cornish miners, with their families, to settle on the reef. Joe pondered over that, and talked about it to some miners of his acquaintance. He discovered that such action on the part of the "bosses" would hurt the pockets of the miners and constitute a grievance. He argued that an independent bachelor miner could make his own terms, but a man with a familier to the state of the state of

He worked himself and others into the belief that the owners were contemplating a big cut in wages. Up to that time there had been no union among the miners. They had been perfectly contented. But Joe turned out to be a born agitator. He called a meeting in Market square and mounted a table. I don't believe he knew the difference between a spade and a shovel himself, and his hands were the long, slim, steely ones of the man who had never known manual labor, but his opening words. His house is situated near the seund; back from it is his dairy farm, run by a head farmer with salaried assistants and a score of farm laborers. English landlords let their property out nowadays to tenantry, each tenant hiring one plot and gaining his living from it independently. Westchester landlords maintain the required number of bards, pay them wages and farmish them with homes on the place, but manage the whole estate as one would a factory—breeding horses, raising sheep and cows, and disposing of the products independently of the workers.

WAGES, $50 A DAY.

WAGES, $70 A DAY. This is the plan on which most of the Westchester and Hempstead so-called country houses are run. For the mascountry houses are rim. For the master's house there are perhaps thirty servants; for the farm work there is a staff of twenty or more. Nearly all the owners are men not in business; they are men of leisure, and ther only duties are those connected with the control of their estates. They are not numbered among the extremely rich, like the Astors, the Vanderbilts, the Beimonts, and the Goulds; but they have enough to keep fifty employés, a herd of cows, a flock of sheep, a stable of horses, many sorts of carriages, a lozen bicycles, and to entertain a houseful of guests.

In wages alone it costs nearly $2000 a month, or $70 a day, to run such a home, for the head farmer and his assistants draw bigger salaries than most doctors and lawyers. Just the monthly butcher's bill of the household, regardless of the farm annex, amounts to more than it costs a bookkeper's family to subsist a whole year in relative comfort.

FEW OF THESE ESTATES PAY. Of course in some instances the farm made to yield something above the conducted her famous country estates with half the lavishness that characterizes these modern manors of the New York rich. Servants are more expensive, soil is more expensive (some of it being within city limits,) and the application of scientific methods of agrigulture has made "gentiemen's farms" enormously high-priced. The income of a million will scarcely maintain the most modest of them.

Wast Modern Manors.

The case of Theodore Havemeyer, the sugar baron, who died the other day, leaving a mansion in New York, a villa at Newport, and a 3000-acre farm at Mahwah, N. J., is typical. Seward Webb has a castle now going up in the Adirondacks, and not long ago bought up a whole county in Vermont. E. D. Morgan finds it necessary to his pleasure to support a mansion in town, a villa at Newport, and a superb estate at Hempstead. W. C. Whitney recently acquired a house in Fifty-fourth street, near Fifth avenue, New York, and for himself and son, in addition to his place on Long Island, he has followed the new fashion by Investing in a domain in the Berkshires, which will rival George Vanderbilt's celebrated Bili more estate in North Carolina. Frederick Vanderbilt has Hyde Park on the Hudson, one of the finest houses in Newport, and a beautiful home at Fortieth street and Fifth avenue. H. McK. Twombly recently purchased the Lorling and the mean servants and the women fee the maid servants and all is unfee the maid servants and all is unfee the manid servants and and other incidentals.

Even to visit these houses is more expensive than some who get invitations can afford. For instance, one must be prepared to leave at least $10 among the servants after an over-Sun and visit. "That would put one up at the swellest hotel in town—and you'd say a better time for your money," said a woman the other day. She may alway a better time for your money, said a woman the other day. She may alway a better time for your money. She had a woman the other day is a sun and the maid servants had wheelded big tips from her. Country-house tipping is getting to be more of a nuisance here than, in the Berkshires, which will rival George Vanderbilt has Hyde Park on the Hudson on one of the fifth avenue. H. McK. Morton, in putting millions of dollars into estates at Rhinebeck-on-the-Hudson, and they, in turn, took the infection from England and France.

HAVEMEYER'S SCHOOOL FOR FARMERS.

Representatives of this tendency to go the English one better in their own practice is the Havemeyer undertaking at Mahwah. As Mr. Havemeyer's son in law, Mr. Mayer, has a taste for the same thing, this great farm is likely to be kept up as in the sugar baron's lifetime. Thirty horses for private use are in the stables; there is a 900-acre deer park, containing sixty deer, on the more premises; a pheasantry, stocked with 2000 birds, and 400 Jersey cows housed in stables lighted by electricity. This farm is one of the farming wonders of the world. Every fine Sunday it is visited by scores of farmers, some coming from other counties, to see the apotheosis of agriculture. Mr. Havemeyer used to take his recreation in studying the details of farm management, and it was an edifying spectacle to see this parent of the powerful sugar trust guicing some humble Jersey farmer about the place, discussing the best methols of feeding solid food to calves with as much earnestness as he would give to corraling an Senate. To run his farm is villa at Newport, and his mansion in Madison avenue, cost much more on the carnestness as he would give to corraling an Senate. He formed his union, and was appointed secretary at $30 a week, and grev gray quickly, inventing grievances to lay before the weekly meetings and keep the members up to the subscribing pitch. The joily old brotherly, reckless, hopeless outcasts! Their daily prayer was that "old Lobengula" would run amuck, and place them in the saddle again. He has since then, and been wiped out, and Dr. Jameson has led the exiles on his foray, and now there are stirring times out there, and I have no doubt my old chums are as happy as they ever can be, pulling at the leash and yelping to be loosed at some-body's throat. And when, some day, an official letter is handed in at the country house, or the farm, or the manse in England, stating that blek, or Harry, or Charlie has died in action, perhaps accounts will be squared at last, and a tear dropped on the grave of a lost reputation.

The round of entertainments is interrupted only twice—first, when the lords and ladies of the manors are invited to Newport or Bar Harbor by persons whom they have entertained, and again when the lords and ladies of the manors come down town or go South to Alken for a month or two in winter and take apartments. All the time they are at home they live in formal pomp and ceremony; there is none of the cid-fashloned do-as-you-please and dress-to-suit-yourself. RICHARD WATSON GILDER.

A CHAT WITH THE EDITOR OF THE CENTURY ABOUT MAGAZINES AND MAGAZINE WRITERS.

The Cheap Magazines and Their Place in Literature-What Illustration Cost-Articles Worth Their Weight in Gold-Advice to New Writers. How a Great Magazine Was Founded-A Pen Pictura of Mr. Gilder.

From Our Own Correspondent.

NEW YORK, June 7, 1897. MET Richard Watson Gilder in the editorial rooms of the Century Magazine the other day. Mr. Gil-der has been editor-in-chief of the Century for the past sixteen years, and has been a part of the magazine since its foundation, in 1870. He is one of the brightest literary men of the coun-try, and perhaps the ablest magazine editor that the United States has produced. Still the general public know but little about him. He is exceedingly modest, and is averse to having any-thing published about himself and his personality. Even as to matters relating to the magazine he said he did not to be interviewed, because speaking he might seem to be taking upon himself credit for work which be-longed in part to others. He told me that the success of the Century, such that the success of the Century, such as it had been, was due, not to one man, but to a number, and that the publishers, his associate editors and the corps of artists and writers connected with them were all joined together in making the Century what it is. This I doubt not is to an extent true, but Mr. Gilder is too modest by half. His work for more than twenty years has shown his remarkable genius, and today the place the Century holds as a great literary-art magazine is largely due to him.

THE LIFE STORY OF AN EDITOR. Richard Watson Gilder is a born editor. He was brought up on printers ink. His father, the Rev. W. H. Gilder, was an eminent clergyman, who varied his ministerial and educational work by writing for the newspapers, and who was at one time editor of the Philadelphia Repository. Young Gilder's boyhood was spent about the printing office of the Long Island Times, in Flushing. He learned to set type long before he was in his teens. His first composition was done when he was so small that he had to stand on the top of a soap box to reach the type cases. When he was 12 years old he published at Flushing a boys' newspaper, known as the St. Thomas Register, and four years later he and two other boys united in editing a campaign journal at Bordentown, N. J., in support of Bell and Everett for the Presidency. When he was about 20 he was a reporter en one of the newspapers of Newark, N. J., and later, with a young companion, Newton Crane, started a paper in Newark, under the title of the Morning Register. By this time young Gilder bad become somewhat known in Hierary circles, and the Scribners made him first an editorial writer, and then the editor of their magazine known as

"Can you give me any idea of what magazines pay for their reading matter?"

r"Different magazines pay different prices," replied Mr. Gilder. "The prices paid in the Century office vary according to the value of the article, to the reputation of the writer and to other things. Some articles may not cost more than $12 per thousand words, while for others we may pay as much as or more than $100 - per thousand words."

"Is it true that you paid Nicolay and Hay $50,000 for their 'Life of Abraham Lincoln?"

"Yes," said Mr. Gilder. "The Century Company paid that amount to secure the recollections of Nicolay and Hay for the magazine. We have several times paid from $15,000 to $18,000 for a dozen articles. Joseph Jefferson received $12,000 for his recollections, and there are a number of other cases of high prices which I might mention."

high prices which I might mention."

THE UNKNOWN WRITER.

"But these men, Mr. Glider, were all famous; how about the unknown writer? Has he any chance in the editorial rooms of the modern magazine? Many people believe that only the writings of men of established reputations are considered by you magazine editors."

"That is not true," replied the editor of the Century. "The new writer has every chance. The competition for good matter is too great to allow an editor to pass over any manuscript without consideration. The hope of every editor is that he may be able to secure some new light in the literary sky. He is so anxious to do this that he often exaggerates the discovery of some slight talent. He is always discovering that he has made mistakes in the past, and I have said that an editor's hell is paved with the manuscripts which he has rejected but which he wishes he had accepted. He has turned them down only to find that some other editor has discovered genius in them. The result is that he is afraid that he may miss finding the spark of genius in the new manuscripts before him, and he often gives the new writers too much chance."

"Do you think such editorials have much weight, Mr. Gilder?"

"I think that a magazine like this can do a great deal to help along in the work of reform. The Century has done what it could to bring about an unpartisan victory for sound money. I think we accomplished something in aiding in the overthrow of the Louislana lottery. The "War Series" and the "Life of Lincoln" have done much to moderate the feeling between the people of the North and South, and there are other similar things I might mention." ery manuscript that comes to the of-"What do you consider the leading sue before the country today?" 1

We are helping to arouse public sentiment in this matter. We have published papers by Dr. Washingnave published papers by Dr. washing-tion Gladden, Dr. Shaw and others re-lating to it, with a view to increasing civic patrictism among the people. "What success are you having?"
"I think," replied Mr. Gilder, "that the people are now beginning to realize that our cities are behind those of the rest of the world in honest, efficient and progressive municipal government. The bosses have already discovered that their selfish and monopolistic distribution of patronage is being interfered with, and they are now making their last attack upon civil-service reform."

"Do you mean by that, Mr. Gilder, nat the days of bossism are num-

"If by numbered you mean that bossbelieve that it will be a long time before the system will entirely pass people are beginning to wake up to the fact that the political machines are other hand, it is said that the merit system may also be called a labor bureau, it can be asserted that it is one working for the interests of the whole people, and especially for those of the poor man.

"Yes. With us every article which is not especially ordered by the editors is read, and sometimes re-read to the Century, he was made, at the death of Dr. Holland, editor-in-chief. Since then he has written for it in poetry and prose, and today many of the strongest of its editorials come from his pen.

THE CHEAP MAGAZINE.

My chat with Mr. Gilder covered a wide range. I first asked as to the influence of the 10-cent magazine upon those of higher prices. He replied:

"I suppose it may have some effect upon some of the high-priced magazine, and it goes no farther. Artitles that are ordered especially by us generally come to the editors without the examination of other readers. But at times the chief editors themselves are the first to look over the new manuscripts."

"Can a man hope to make a living by writing for the magazines, Mr. Gilder?" I asked.

"A number of persons are now doing so," was the reply. associate editor, in connection with J.

"What is now called the Century Magazine," replied Mr. Gilder, "was, during the first ten years of its existence, known as Scribner's Monthly. It was founded by the Scribners, J. G. Holland and Roswell Smith. The idea originated with the Scribners. They had been publishing an unfilustrated monthly under the title of Hours at Home. When Mr. Scribner proposed to Dr. J. G. Holland that he should come to New York and together they should found a magazine with illustrations, J. G. Holland had been very successful as one of the editors of the Springfield Republican, and his books had had a very wide sale. The Timothy Titcomb letters, which first appeared in the Republican, had been published in book form by the Scribners, and had had an enormous circulation. Holland's "Life of Lincoln" had been very widely read, and so also had his poem "Bitter-Sweet," When Mr. Scribner asked Dr. Holland to Join him in the founding of a magazine, Dr. Holland replied that he would do so, provided Mr. Scribner would allow him to choose a partner. To this Mr. Scribner consented, and Dr. Holland chose Roswell Smith, who took a third of the stock, and became the business manager of the new enterprise. Before Dr. Holland died, Mr. Smith bought a large part of his stock, having already bought out the Scribner interest. The principal workers on the magazine was changed to the Century."

Senator Clark's Joke.

QUIET and sedate is Senator Clark of Wyoming. Yet even Senator Clark loves to play a practical joke Clark loves to play a practical joke once in a while, even when, as a day or two ago, it does not succeed.

Senator Elkins was at his desk, surrounded by a throng of page boys, all anxious to secure the Senator's signature in their autograph books. As fast as he could dip his pen in ink, the obliging West Virginian signed his name. Then, directly in front of him, was laid a blank order on the Sergeant-at-arms.

inen, directly in front of him, was laid a blank order on the Sergeant-atarms.

"Hello." said the Senator, without looking up, as he made a bold, round "S" on the signature line, "more stationery? I don't remember anything about it, but I guess it's all right."

So a large "B" followed the "S." Half the signature was down. The pen did not move quite so fast. "What is it that I am wanted to draw upon the Seargeant-atarms for?" said the Senator, speaking to himself. "It isn't money, and it isn't furniture. Still—"and an "E" followed the first two initials of his name.

"Who is it wants me to sign, any way?" queried Mr. Elkins, laying down his pen, and turning round, only to meet the smiling countenance of Senator Cark "Come some other day," laughed Mr. Elkins. which aims to discuss the great move-ments in art, science, society, politics and religion. I asked Mr. Gilder where this feature of the Century originated. He replied:

"There were editorials in the maga-zine from the start. Dr. Holland had a department entitled "Topics of the Time." which expressed the opinions of the editor upon things which were up-permost. We have the same depart-ment today."

He was, accordingly beset by agents and the owners of houses in different parts of town. "Now, Senator," said she, when they had thoroughly inspected it, and had stopped in the drawing-room to talk the matter over, "I am going to rent this house to you for a mere song, because I am so anxious to have some one in it who will look after my treasures and will keep things up."
"How much, madam," demanded the Senator, "do you propose to ask for your house by the year?"
"Four thousand five hundred dollars," said the lady, "and at that price I think it is the most reasonable house in town."

Why Uncle Ike Knotted the Tail

NE of Buffalo's adjacent towns has an odd character in the person of an old darkey peddler commonly an odd character in the person of an old darkey peddler commonly known as Uncle Ike. His peculiarities appertain not only to himself, but to his possessions which consist of a horse and wagon. Outwardly the horse has the appearance of suffering dire misery with every step he takes, being the leanest and hungriest quadruped that ever chewed hay, but inwardly his master asserts that there is not an animal for miles around with as much spirit. Be that as it may, Ike's horse is made the butt of numberless jokes, and the animal has become a byword in local gessip. Ike laughs with the jokers, and returns many a good reply that throws the laugh back on the shoulders of the senders.

One day he drove up in front of the village store, and with an unnecessarily loud "whos" brought his horse to a standstill. A group of wags sauntered up and critically surveyed the nag, as is their wont, pretending to admire beauties that are lamentably lacking. Finally one of them noted that Ike had knotted the animal's tail.

"Hey, Uncle Ike." he cried, "what have you got it tied up in a knot for?"

"Look er here, boss, you see dat horse am lean, don't you?"

We can print only about 400, so you see we must reject many very good articles. As it is we buy more than we should. There is a never-ending temptation to purchase new matter, and the result is that we have a great amount of literary capital stored away upon the payments for which we receive no interest, and some of which we receive no interest, and some of which we receive no interest, and some of which we shall never be able to use."

Barrymore and Bozenta,

Barrymore and Bozenta.

I T used to be the loveliest amusement of the season to catch Count Bozenta and Barrymore together when Modjeska petted Barry as her stage lover, and her faithful devotee everywhere. The Count-and Madame are so perfectly mated that no such unpleasantness as a disagreement between this pair ever grew out of any manner of outrageous complications. The Count is a fiend for argument, and Barrymore, being Irish and eloquent, is quite as fond of pro and con as Bozenta, and the two couldn't pass each other on the street without violent contention about the simplest, most trivial points of difference. Madame would invariably fly to the rescue of Bozenta when things waxed torrid.

"Ah, Barry, dear, do not contradict Charlie; he has heart disease, and you must be entirely wrong, of course, anyhow," nalvely would Modjeska settle the affair out of court.

All the time they quarreled Bozenta and Barrymore were inseparable companions. Once I said ot Bozenta:

"You must miss Mr. Barrymore this year from your company?"

"Ah, I do; ze ingrate," exclaimed Bozenta in his ecstatic Polish dialect; "more zan heaven could tell. He iss one of ze mos' brilliant actors in ze profession and iss sweet as a summer morning, but I haf to hate him he iss so much a d—(excuse me) fool."

Expecting instant disagreement with anything he might present for Barrymore's diverging opinion, it was Bozenta's habit to blow a storm of cigarette ashes over himself and stop Barry, plunging both the subject of argument and the indisputable answer at Maurice and then filt absently out of sight.

"Wot you think of Gladstone, Barry, for me no," would shout the Count, hastening out of reach of Mr. Barrymore's home rule defense of the grand old man.

Understanding Barrymore's predilection for things British and clever, Bozenta would say:
"Maurice, wot you think off ze English comedian—he is a hopeless thing list and poless.

Understanding Barrymore's predilection for things British and clever, Bozenta would say:

'Maurice, wot you think off ze English comedian—he is a hopeless thing toujours, eh?"

Once they had a famous squabble over a blackbird.

"As obvious and blatant a blackbird as ever stole corn." explains Barry, "which Bozenta insisted was a robin."

Bozenta brought out tomes of imaginative authority and spouted personal reminiscences of Aubudon at Barry until that handsome fellow's ears drooped, and while Bozenta glibly quoted the merry kird flew away and Bozenta described it as he chose and Barry listened and wanted to wrestle with his conversational manager.

These daily wrangles always ended by Barry deliberately calling the Count a liar, and the Count instantly discharged Barry, or the Count calling Barrymore a liar and Barrymore formally but indignantly delivering his resignation. About four times a week these interchanges of decisive courtesies took place and the adorable Modjeska was expected to accomplish the very easy task of reconciliation. One night it suited Barrymore to accept the release from his contract and he took a train for New York, a proceeding Bozenta does not understand to this day.—[Chicago News.

We do welcome anyone with an altogether fresh idea, such as has never occurred to us. It stirs us up mentally, just as a good stiff breeze stirs up the dead calm of a summer atmosphere. I like an oddity—a person of whom people say, "How singular he is"—because he almos" always surprises me into fresh trains of thought, and stirs up my ideas until they are as lively as a well-shaken bag of feathers. No, the world could not do without the singular man, by any means.

And the happy-souled man or wo-man; what a deal they do for the world, even if they are poor and humble! I've one of this sort in my mind's eye now, one of this sort in my mind's eye now, the poor, impecunious woman, who sits all day just below the City Hall in her chair under the shelter of her umbrella. One foot is bound up and shoeless, her hands are drawn out of shape, and she can only eke out an existence by the sale of the few trifies upon her stand, but all day long she smiles like a sunbeam, and her middle-aged face is as cheery as that of a happy child. If you don't buy anything she smiles on you all the same, and evidently does not entertain any grudge against you, but thinks that you and the world are all right. She is one of those rich poor ones that we find now and then in this big, busy world of ours, who wear so serenely the mantle of content.

What a lovely sight that was as an old, gray-headed man went past me carrying in his arms a beautiful, golden-headed little child. The way was a little rough—it was on the hills—and so grandfather had lifted the little one and was carrying her until he could set her feet upon the sidewalk a short distance ahead. The small rounded arm was pressed against his own withered one, and the sweet blue eyes peered lovingly into his, while she cooed and laughed, and her happy prattle was brimful of the gladness of young life. Isn't life lovely when it is sweet and new and guileless, and the dew of heaven is fresh upon its face?

The stones were sharp that were imbedded in our rude sidewalks, and many a time have I suffered martyrdom as I devoted the day to necessary shopping excursions, when every store in the city had to be ransacked before I could find a tithe of what I desired. I used to get awfully angry, for-I was only a young girl then, and wish that I was back in Boston where I did not have to waste a whole day in searching for a yard of ribbon of the right width and shade, and then be compelled to do without it after all. I believe I should have been an old reprobate by this time if things had continued as they were then. But now it's just lovely to put a hundred dollars or so in my purse to purchase a few knick-nacks in the way of dress trimmings. I've found some of the lovellest things you ever saw, and I know that I could have done no better even in dear old Boston itself. Come home with me, won't you, and see what I have bought?" home with me, won't you, and see what I have bought?"

HUNTING BUFFALO. uffalo Bill Recalls a Stampede

Buffalo Bill Recalls a Stampede Reminiscence.

[Col. William F. Cody in the Independent:] One of the most exciting scenes in connection with hunting the buffalo was a "buffalo stampede." I recall an exciting incident of this kind. It was while I was traveling across the plains with a bull-train outfit, carrying supplies for Gen. Albert Sidney Johnson's army, that was sent against the Mormons. A train consisted of twenty-five wagons, all in charge of one man, who was known as the wagon-master. The second man, in command, was the assistant wagon-master. There was an extra hand, the night herder and the cavallard driver, whose duty it was to drive the lame and loose cattle. The whole train was denominated "a bull outfit." Everything at that time was called an outfit, and at the present time the paraphernall of the hunter who goes out on a hunting expedition is called by the same name.

When the train struck the South Platte River we found the country alive with buffaloes. Vast herds of these monarchs of the plains were roaming all around us, and we lay over one day for a grand hunt. The next day we pulled out of camp, and the train was strung out a considerable length along the road, which ran near the foot of the sand hills, two miles from the river. Between the road and the river we saw a large herd of buffaloes grazing quietly, they had been down to the stream for a drink. At the same time we observed a party of returning Californians coming from the west. They, too, noticed the buffalo herd, and, in another moment, they were dashing down up them with terrific speed. The buffalo herd stampeded at once, and broke down the hills. So hotly were they pursued by the buffalo at once, and broke down the hills.

Some of the wagons were turned clear around, and many of the terrified oxen attempted to run to the hills, with the heavy wagons attached to them.
Others turned around so short that they broke the wagon-tongues off.
Nearly all the teams got entangled in their gearing and became wild and unruly, so that the perplexed drivers were the wagons and the drivers were soon

A MOTHER'S RECOMPENSE. The Duchess of Kent gave up every thing in order to qualify her daughter for the exalted position, and she was repaid in that which a mother most prizes—filial reverence and affection. A gratifying proof of this filial love was the fact that the Queen paid all her father's debts out of her first year's income, and from her second she discharged all the financial obligations which the Duchess of Kenthad incurred in meeting the innumerable heavy calls upon her as the mother of the future sovereign. The Queen's affection for her mother was always intense. In 1840, when an attempt was made upon her life, the Queen altered the course of her.drive, and went at once to inform her mother that she was uninjured, before the Duchess could be needlessly alarmed by the rumor of thing in order to qualify her daugh

There was a general feeling of relief ciples of morality and justice. The credit of it all was justly given to the widowed mother of the Queen, and to this day the British nation has never forgotten the debt of gratitude it owes to the Duchess of Kent for the happy result of the thoughtfulness, perseverance, self-denial and practical common sense which she displayed in the education of the future sovereign.

THE DUCHESS OF KENT.

The Duke of Kent died on January 23.

The Duke of Kent died on January 23, 1820, when the little Princess Victoria was only eight months old, leaving his widow in straitened circumstances. The Duchess was then a handsome woman of 33 years, of amiable disposition, attractive manners, and fond of society, and if she chose to do so, could easily have taken a prominent place in the fast and pleasure-loving set that controlled the British court in those days. Fortunately for the English people, the Duchess of Kent fully appreciated the importance of the duty which devolved upon hef, when, after her husband's death, she found herself in sole charge of the probable successor to the throne. She then determined to devote the best years of her life wholly to the task of molding the unformed character of her little daughter into that shape and strength that best fitted the future Queen for the responsible position she was destined to fill. The Duke of Kent died on January 23, was destined to fill.

The Duchess's fitness for the task The Duchess's fitness for the task was well understood by her husband, as was evidenced by the following clauses in his will; "I do nominate, constitute and appoint, my beloved wife, Victoire, Duchess of Kent, to be the sole guardian of our dear child, the Princess Alexandrina Victorie, to all intents and for all purposes whatsoever."

HER SCHEME OF EDUCATION.

Knowing, as she did, that the moral atmosphere of the court of George IV was not favorable to the furtherance of her plans for the proper education of her child, the Duchess shut herself up in the old palace at Kensington. where, for seventeen years, she and the youthful Princess passed a life of almost complete seclusion. The household was regulated in a severely simple, but most judicious manner. The family breakfasted at 8 o'clock, the Princess Victoria, or Drina, as she was then called, having her bread and milk and fruit on a table by her mother's side. Then came an hour's walk or drive, after which two hours were devoted to her instruction by the Duchess personally. Then came recreation until 2 o'clock, when a plain luncheon was served, followed by two hours' more instruction. A visit or a drive preceded an early supper, after which, on fine evenings, their all set out on the laws. HER SCHEME OF EDUCATION. instruction. A visit or a drive preceded an early supper, after which, on fine evenings, thety all sat out on the lawn under the trees until 9 o'clock, when the Princess went to bed. So passed the even tenor of Victoria's early life first-class Atlantic steamer, her to do. We feel more sensibly than she could what a new safeguard her success has thrown around the sanctity of our homes. For our wives and daughters' sake we have reason enough to be thankful that profligacy finds no countenance in the court and that their purity of heart is exposed to none of those shocks which it is so often fated to sustain when the late of the same than the same tha finds no countenance in the court and that their purity of heart is exposed to none of those shocks which it is so often fated to sustain when vice walks unabashed in the highest places in society. When the Duchess of Kent shut herself up at Kensington to devote her best energies to the education of a daughter and a queen, she little thought, perhaps, that she was laying not only Great Britain, but the world under lasting obligations. The light in which constitutional monarchy has been placed by the virtues of her daughter has, probably, taught more than one absolute sovereign the truth, even if he refuse to give it practical recognition, that the surest basis of the throne is laid in the respect and affection of its subjects."

A New Wrinkle Chaser.

An apparatus of simple construction has lately been invented by a clever individual, who has the interest of women at heart. A "wrinkle chaser" he calls it, and although the theory is not new, the contrivance is so easy of manipulation that any one who cares to preserve her complexion, already beautiful, or improve one not quite up to the mark, will eagerly give it a trial. Over an alcohol lamp stands a small vessel filled with water. From this vessel is a curved tube, ending in a large glass globe, which comes in various sizes, so as to admit different sizes of heads.

When wanted for use the lamp is lighted, and as the water reaches the boiling point, the owner of the to-beimproved complexion places her face in this open globe, when, if desired, the glass can be closed almost hermetically by hanging a bath towel over the globe and head. The steaming continues for 10 or 15 minutes, and immediately after the face is bathed in cool water. In order to soften the skin and dissolve the particles of fat that may have settled in the pores a few drops of aromatic essence are added to the water in the boiler.

The regeneration and beautifying of the skin is possible by increasing the activity of the pores of the skin wherever it has been interfered with by age or other influences. The lessening of the skin action becomes evident by the withering of the skin will create pimples and blackheads, while superfluous activity of pigment cells becomes evident by the appearance of freckles and moles. All these shortcomings can be obviated by the regular and repeated steaming of the face, which has a very wholesome influence, particularly if feliowed by bathing the complexion with cool water.

A PLANTER'S WIFE. cumb's Dealings With Hated Col. Tarleton.

One warm morning in the spring of 1780 Mrs. Slocumb was sitting on the broad plazza about her home on a large plantation in South Carolina. Her husband and many of his neighbors were with Sumter, fighting for the struggling colonies, but on this beautiful morning there were almost no signs of war to be there were almost no signs of war to be seen. As yet this plantation had not been molested, and as Mrs. Slocumb glanced at her little shild playing near her, or spoke to her sister, who was her companion, or addressed a word to the servants, there was no alarm manifest. But in a moment the entire scene was changed.

But in a moment the entire scene was changed.

"There come some soldiers," said her sister, pointing toward an officer and twenty troopers, who turned out of the highway and entered the yard.

Mrs. Slocumb made no reply, allhough her face became pale, and there was a tightening of the lips as she watched the men. Her fears were not allayed when she became satisfied that the leader was none offier than the lated Col. Tarleton. That short, thick-set body, dressed in a gorgeous scarlet uniform, the florid face and cruel expression, proclaimed the approaching officer only too well. But the mistress gave no sign of fear as she arose to listen to the words of the leader, who soon drew his horse to a halt before her.

"It is my husband's."
"And is he here?"
"He is not."
"He is no rebel, is he?"
"No, sir. He is a soldier in the army of his country and fighting her invaders."

"He must be a rebel and no friend of his country if he fights against his

Tarleton's face flushed, but he made no reply, and, turning to one of his companions, gave orders for a camp to be made in the orchard near by. Soon the 1100 men in his command had pitched their tents, and the peaceful plantation took on the garb of war. Returning to the plazza and again bowing low the British colonel said "Necessity comples His Majesty's troops to occupy your place for a time, and I will have to make my quarters in your house; that is, if it will not be too great an inconvenience to you." "My family consist at present of only myself, my child and sister, besides the servants, and we must obey your orders."

In less than an hour the entire place was transformed. The white tents covered the lawn, horses were tied to the bath and tones colders in hight uniteres.

gave sharp orders for scouring the country within the neighborhood of ten or fifteen miles.

This sharp command was not lost upon Mrs. Slocumb, nor was she slow to act upon it herself, as we soon shall see. But for the present, trying to stifle her fears, she determined to make the best of the situation, and avert all the danger possible by providing for the comfort of Tarleton and his men, and accordingly she had a dinner soon ready fit for a king, and surely far too good for such a cruel and bloodthirsty man as Tarleton soon was known to be.

When the celonel and his staff were summoned to the dining-room, they sat down to a table which fairly groaned beneath the good things heaped upon it. It was such a dinner as only the South Carolina matrons knew how to prepare, and the men soon became jovial under its influences. "We shall have few sober men by morning," said a captain. "If this is the way we are to be treated. I suppose when this little war is over, all this country will be divided among the soldiers. Eh, colonel?"

"Undoubtedly the officers will occupy large portions of the country." replied

"Undoubtedly the officers will occupy "Undoubtedly the country," replied Tarleton.
"Yes, I know just how much they will each occupy," said Mrs. Slocumb, unable to maintain silence longer.
"And how much will that be, madam?" inquired Tarleton, bowing himself to have a quiet seat on his ground."

But the conversation suddenly was interrupted by the sounds of firing.
"Some straggling scout running away," said one of the men, not quite willing to leave the table.
"No. sir. There are rifles there, and a good many of them, too," said Tarleton, rising quickly and rushing to the plazza, an example which all, including Mrs. Slocumb, at once followed. She was trembling now, for she felt assured that she could explain the cause of the commotion.

sured that she could explain the cause of the commotion.

"May I ask, madame," said Tarleton, turning to her as soon as he had given his orders for the action of the troops, "whether any of Washington's forces are in this neighborhood or not."

"You must know that Gen. Green and the Marquis are in South Carolina, and I have no doubt you would be pleased to see Lee once more. He shook your hand very warmly the last time he met you, I am told."

An oath escaped the angry colonel's lips, and he glanced for a moment at the scar which the wound of Lee had left on his hand, but he turned abruptly and ordered the troops to form on the right, and he dashed down the lawn.

A shout and the sound of firearms drew the attention of Mrs. Slocumb to the long avenue that led to the house. A cry escaped her at the sight, for there was her husband, followed by two of her neighbors, pursuing on horseback a band of five tories whom Tarleton had sent to scour the country. On and on they came, and it was evident that the pursuers were too busy to have noticed the army of Tarleton. Broadswords and various kinds of weapons were flashing in the air, and it was plain that the enraged Slocumb saw nothing but the tories he was pursuing. Could nothing be done? Would they run into the very heart of the camp? Mrs. Slocumb tried to scream and warn her husband, but not a sound could she make. One of the tories had just fallen, when she saw her husband's horse suddenly stop and swerve to one side. What was the cause?

Quickly wheeling again they started directly for the house near which the guard had been stationed. On they swept, and, leaping the fence of lath about the garden patch, amid a shower of bullets, they started through the open lots. Another shower of bullets fell about them as their horses leaped the broad brook, or canal as it was called, and then almost before the guard had cleared the fences they had gained the shelter of the woods beyond and were safe.

The chagrin of the British Tarleton was as great as the relief of Mrs. Slocumb, and when on the following day the troops moved on, the cordial adleu of the hostess led the colonel to say: "The British are not robbers, madam. We shall pay you for all we have taken." "I am so rejoiced at what you have not taken that I shall not complain if I do not hear from you again." And she neither heard nor complained.

REFRACTORY SHOULDERBLADES
Simple and Effective Exercises for Plattening the Back.

Shoulderblades require more attention than they usually receive, if one is desirous of possessing a graceful figure. Correct shoulderblades are flat as the traditional flounder; if they protrude in the least degree a series of exercises should be inaugurated, and ten minutes devoted to athletics night and morning, when one is free from heavy clothing, will do wonders in the way of improving them.

Before beginning the exercises one must stand properly; that is, squarely upon both feet, and during the time breath deep and full. If one stands before an open window, so much the better. For shoulderblade, movement No. 1, hold the right arm straight up and the left arm at a right angle to the body, and then, standing on the tip of the toes, stretch the arms to their greatest length, turning the hands constantly backward and forward.

WON HIS SPURS,

The Youngest Leader of His Rank on Either Side.

A Boy Colonel Who Died Beside Guns, That Never Had Known Defeat in Battle.

[CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

The Confederate guns in the battle where the youthful Miles won his last decoration. Ream's Station, were handled by a Virginia boy hero. Col. Willie Pegram. Pegram was doubtless the youngest leader of his rank in either army. His position was colonel commanding a battalion of six light batteries of artillery corresponding to that of a brigadier-general of infantry. He was three years younger than Miles, and had won five promofantry. He was three years younger than Miles, and had won five promotions and decorations one after the other by heroic conduct on the battle-field, beginning as a private in a crack military company composed of "gilded youths" of the University of Virginia. The "gilded youth," by the way, of either side, who captured decorations during the civil war, got them by merit and not by favoritism. Just as the third Napoleon took his princeling under fire to see if he had soldier stuff in him, so the generals compelled their der fire to see if he had soldier stuff in him, so the generals compelled their sons to begin at the bottom of the ladder. The father of one of my school-mates was a medical director of an army corps, with the rank of general, and finding that the boy was smitten with "army fever" put a knapsack filled with lint, bandages and cordials for the wounded upon his shoulders and had him tramp along in the column beside the soldiers. A career as humble as that was allotted to Fred Grant, who made his way to his father's camps at Vicksburg. Robert E. Lee's son and namesake served as a private in the —himself. Four guns had been disabled and sixty officers and men killed and wounded.

The fame of the boy artillerist spread through the camps and into the Confederâte capital. One night a player on the stage of Richmond Theater, hitting off the times, said that the reason Capt. Willie Pegram's guns always fought at close quarters was that the young leader was near-sighted, and wouldn't allow his men to fire until he could see the target. The soldiers in the audience arose in their seats and cheered the sally.

The theater incident reached the ears of Stonewall Jackson, who sent for Pegram and gave him a fine new battery in his famous corps. In his first flattle under "Old Jack," Capt. Willie unlimbered his pieces for a duel with fourteen Federal guns, at eighty yards. The Federal infantry charged so close that he resorted to canister to save his battery, and when men and horses were dropping around the guns with appalling rapidity, the youthful captain stimulated his new recruits by shouting. "Pitch in, boys, and do your prettlest; Gen. Jackson is looking on."

At the end of his first campaign with Stonewall. Pegram was deecorated with the star of a battalion major. In Jackson's flank march to Chancellorsville the battalion leaders were cut off one by one, leaving the boy artillerist commander of ten field batteries. At a campdre talk one evening when Jackson's swholt had become history, the officers were discussing their martial glories, when one of them said to Pegram: "Well, colonel, what day do you reckon your happiest?" Oh, the day I had sixty guns under me, galloping down the Chancellorsville pike after Hooker and his people."

But it wasn't "galloping" alone that Pegram did in order to rattle "Fighting Jôe" and "his people."

MORE DECORATIONS. Pegram made a forced ride of ninety miles in order to lead his battalion into the first day's fight at Gettysburg. His batteries fought every day on that field, and another decoration was placed upon the young major's coat collar. In a crisis at Spottsylvania the fate of the army hung upon the forty cannons which Lieut.-Col. Willie Pegram had crisis at Spottsylvania the fate of the army hung upon the forty cannons which Lieut.-Col. Willie Pegram had posted on the heights around the Courthouse. Gens. Gordon, Hill, Early and Lee stood leside them, anxiously watching the movements of 'two of Burnside's fresh divisions which Grant had ordered to storm the position at a time when the Confederate works were bare of infantry defenders. The boy artillerist distributed extra rounds of canister, and with his pieces double shotted, rode along the line of battle, waiting to give the word, To each battery commander he whispered the warning. "Shoot down the first man who pulls a lanyard until I raise my saber for a signal."

With marvelous self-control the gunners waited until their target was just over there, across the trench. Then the saber flashed in the air, and the double loads of canister were let loose. Three times the fire was repeated, and the assalling columns disappeared.

Another decoration followed Spottsylvania, and Willie Pegram, at the age of 22, held the full rank of colonel. One day, in front of Petersburg, he rallied a wavering brigade of infantry, whose leaders had been shot down, selzed the brigade colors in his own hands and pode into battle at the head of the line. It was then that a corps commander asked for his promotion to a general-ship in infantry, but Lee declared that the boy artillerist was worth more at the head of his own battalion. When the Confederates made their last stand. At Five Forks, Pegram's batteries were again in the breach. But Sheridan's troovers rode over them, and the boy colonel died, sword in hand, beside the guns that never, while he lived, had known defeat in battle.

[Toledo Blade:] Paul Dunbar, the colored poet from Ohio, is enjoying his English tour, though unfortunately it is marred by trouble with his agent. Maj. The financial results were not as great as Miss Pond hoped, and Dunbar was obliged to withdraw from his engagement as artillery, where he was known to his comrades by his boyhood nickname "Bob," and was often, during the campaign, unrecognizable, even to his own father, by reason of the grime from the guns or the mud plashes covering his face and uniform when the cannon upon which he rode—providing he was not tagging at the wheels—were dragged into action through mire and mud holes.

In a little while Tim produced a queer looking vehicle, the propelling power of which was a gaunt but docile donkey, and Tom, mounting the rickety seat beside the driver, was soon moving over a regular Arkansas road with a strange country before him. "That's Susan's place—that's "The Roses. If you find a flower on the diggin's let me know."

As Tom had aiready paid his fare, he sprang down and turned to thank Tim beside, when the donkey was turned and driven off.

What startled Tom was the absence of a light, and no one came to the door to greet him. Surely he and Tim had talked loud enough to have attracted attention, but he knocked without receiving an answer.

His repeated raps elicited no response at all, and investigation told him that the house was empty; that, in fact, it had not been inhabited for months.

Despite the shadows about it, he could see that it had been deserted for some time, weeds had grown rank where they had once been kept down, and a spider had spun her web across the front windows.

Tom was in a quandary, but all at once he was startled by the barking of a dog and the next moment a little cur ran at his legs.

He fought the dog off with his valles and then footstens and explaints.

These were a man and a boy, the former with an ax over his shoulder and the boy carrying a dingy bucket in his hand.

Tom asked at once if his aunt Susan had lived thereand the pair exchanged sudden glances.

"Susan Blair went away two months ago," said the man. "She said she was going West and that's the last we've heard o' her? Your aunt? Mighty good woman was Susan, but she had queer ways and fancied that the settlement was agin' her, which it was not."

Tom then proceeded to tell how Tim Holloway had brought him to the spot, whereat the man shook his head.

"He'd do anything, ch. 15sau" and he glanced down at the boy at his side." Nothin' good in that boy," and father and son laughed, not at Tom's misfortune, but at the trick Tim Holloway had played, not with the intention of doing harm, but out of "pure cussedness," as the woodchopper phrased it.

A NEW EXPERIENCE.

As passing the night under his aunt's roof was out of the question, Tom accepted an invitation from the gair to cepted an invitation from the fair to accompany them, and the little Arkansan, who was stout and wiry, took hold of Tom's valise, and swung it airily over his shoulder.

It was a real southern home, it habited by the middle class that greeted the city boy, after half an hour's walk, and in a little time he was seated in the main room of it telling about the city from which he had come.

He had been granted a leave of three weeks' absence, and as he wanted to spend it out of the counting-room he concluded to make the most of a bad bargain and remain with the Dawsons. At the end of the first week Tom Sinclair knew the forest and adjacent streams almost as well as the two boys of the household. Heavy rains interfered with some of their excursions, but boating trips became the order of the day and these were thoroughly enjoyable.

By and by there came from the near

The Arkansas had reached the danger line: indeed, the stout levees were threatened and in some districts already people were flying for their lives. The next day there was a dearth of flood news, but he next it came like a deluge. The levees had broken and a flood of terrible proportions was rushing toward the Dawson home. Even Harvey Dawson hesitated before hagain disputed this late news, and in answer to the entreatries of his wife he said they would move out the next day at sunrise.

hour in which to catch the train, and I've dropped in to wish the house success while I'm gone."

"Thatik you. I hope you'll find your aunt well, and I know she'll be delighted to see you."

It was a long night for the imprisoned ones in the house, but it fortunately kept upright and did not sink far enough to flood the attre. More than once they looked anxiously for daylight, and when they greeted the first streaks of morning it was with blanched cheeks and slient tongues.

IN THE WATER.

Suddenly in the gray light of dawn the house careened, and with a loud thin should be suited by the state of the state, not far from the Arkansas River. It was Tom's intention to take his aunt, who was a widow, by surprise. Therefore, he had not written her about his vacation, and he smiled to himself whenever he thought of the pardonable little game he was about to play.

A few hours after leaving Little Rock Tom was sat down at a typical Southern station, with the shadows of night gathering about him.

He was about to ask the telegraph agent the nearest road to the Roses, as his aunt called her home in her letters—just as if she lived on a large estate—when a boy of his own size came up, asking Tom what he was looking for.

"I want to find the place where my aunt lives," answered Tom.

"What's her name?"

"Susan Blair."

"I live out in that direction myself," said Tim.

"Near my aunt's?"

"Yes: I know the roads pretty well, so let's be off."

TIM'S JOKE.

In a little while Tim produced a queer tovered, found himself out of the cabin in the water.

The city boy's first impulse was to-swim somewhere, but burdened with water, he found he could not do this easily. The next moment something a limb and holding on with desperation of despair.

of the Dawsons had escaped, and in a short time it seemed to disappear, and Tom was alone on the waters.

The day brightened, but no help came. The imperiled boy looked in every direction, straining his eyes for assistance, but he could not see anything that looked like help.

His tree had stopped apparently in the middle of the flood, having struck a soild obstacle under the surface, and Tom, wet, to the skin and coid, sat in the forks and contemplated as complacently as he could the deluge that surrounded him.

He did not know how far he had drifted from the scene of the mishap. The whole country was strange to him, and he did not know where he was.

Now and then he caught sight of dark objects moving far away on the surface of the water, but whether they were trees or people in dugouts, he could not determine. The sun, which occasionally appeared, told him that it must be near noon, and he felt hungry and almost exhausted.

What if he had to pass a night in that wilderness of waters? What if he was destined to, remain there another day unrescued, and even unnoticed? The mere thought of such a thing made him shudder.

The day did wane as he feared, and found him on the tree in the water.

HIS REPEATED RAPS ELICITED NO RE-SPONSE.

The sun went down without rescue, and Tom Sinclair watched it sink into the flood as it seemed wondering if he would ever see it rise again.

While the tide about him was not swift like it was elsewhere, it was bad enough, and the water was chilling and dark.

While the tide about him was not swift like it was elsewhere, it was bad enough, and the water was chilling and dark.

The boy, when night came, lashed himself to the limb with some cord found in one of his pockets, for should he fall asleep he might drop into the water and drown before he could even help himself.

"That's better," said Tom, as he finished the job. "Little did I think when Jimmy Poor told me to put the cord in my pocket as I might need it at Aunt Susan's, that I would ever use it for this purpose. I wonder what's become of Tim Holloway?"

It was the first time that Tom had thought of the boy that had played him the trick which indirectly got him into his present trouble. He wondered if the flood had found Tim prepared and how the little trickster was faring while he (Tom) was clinging to a limb in the middle of the inland sea.

"That's a light out yonder!" suddenly cried Tom, an hour later, as something which at first resembled a firefly danced on the surface of the water to wind-boat, grew larger and more important to Tom Sinclair.

"I don't see any one," came over the flood.

"Straight ahead," answered Tom.

"There! Pull away, Jerry. Mebbe it's the city lark."

Tom started at the sound of the voice, and then waited for the boat to come alongside.

"It's the boy who wanted to see aunt. Susan." exclaimed another boy as he bent toward Tom and looked at him in the fork of a friendly tree.

"Never mind, Tim Holloway. I'll call it even if you just take me out of this tree."

"That we will. I feared the flood would find you and the Dawsons, and I'll do the right thing by helping you find your aunt Susan. It's a big flood, bigger than you ever saw in the city, eh, Mr. Tom?"

In a little while Tom was in the ample boat, which was managed by Tim Holloway and a man, but under the oby's orders, and Tom tried direct them to the spot where he had last seen the home of the Dawsons. The house was found lodged against a number of trees, and the entire family, which had escaped by a miracle, was rescued.

The trainmaster, who was in sympathy with the colonel, finally allowed the private car to come over the mountains, but the general manager, arriving at Denver, found his place filled by another man. Palmer and Dodge immediately took possession of the Utah extension, and the little line that lay along the banks of the Jordan was from that day operated as an independent—almost offensively independent—road, and they callled it the Rio Grande Western. Of course all the rolling stock bore the initials of the parent road, and, to all appearances, belonged to it, but the new management, or rather the new road, began to corral cars and locomotives and brand them with the new brand. There were a number of new and valuable locomotives at the west end, and how to get them over the state line and into Colorado was a question which was occupying the minds of the new officials at Denver.

An old enzineer from the east end went out to work for the new road. They were glad to get good mountain men, and this man, being a good runner, was given a new locomotive, but the first time he found himself near the State line, he opened up the throttle, and dashed away for Denver, and the the new road was short a good locomotive. When this performance had been repeated a number of times, the western people placed an operator on the mountain side near the siding which is at the State line. One day a daring driver made a dash for the east end with a new engine. The operator was notified, and when the purloiner came to the State line he found a short rail. The switch had been thrown and the new locomotive went plowing out into the sage brush. The western officials followed it up, bicked up the

He watched it closely. It moved at first toward him and then in another direction. Perhaps some person was searching for people imprisoned by the water, and this hope grew in Tom's heart while he watched the light.

At last he made a trumpet of his hands and called for help. His voice floated over the water, and the light seemed to become stationary. He called again and again, each time pitching his voice in a higher key.

"They've heard me!" said the eager boy. "The light is coming this way."

SULTAN'S FRENCH MOTHER.

The Martinique Fortune Teller's Prophecies Came True.

The Martinique Fortune Teller's Prophecies Came Trae.

The present Sultan of Turkey is partially French by descent, a curious fact, from which hangs a romance.

Every loiterer in the pleasant byways of history will recall the charming story told anent the Empress Josaphine and her friend, Mile. Clara Bazillais of how a mulatto fortune teller prophesied that each of these young beauties of Martinique should marry an Emperor. Josephine, who was then merely Mile. de la Pagerie, laughed at what she deemed a piece of idle flattery: and so did the equally incredulous Clara Bazillais.

But nevertheless the prophecy came true in both cases. Josephine became Empress of the French, and Mile. Bazillais, by as strange a turn of the wheel of chance, ended her life as the first consort, and only actually wife of Sultan Mahmoud II.

The late Sultan Abdul Madjid, while in Paris in 1867, told Napoleon III the full story of his mother's romantic adventures. Mile. Bazillais was on her way from Martinique to Marseilles, when captured by a piratical galley of Malta. and carrier to Constantinople. There she was exposed for sale in the slave mart, but Sultan Mahmoud, happening to pass that way, fell in love with the fair maid of Martinique and bought her for a very large sum. Mile. Bazillais acquired an extraordinary influence over the grand Turk—so great

DEAD AT HIS DESK.

That is the story the morning newspapers tell of the modern business man. Too much money getting. Too little care for health. Too much rush, and strain, and wear and tear. Too little time to eat, to sleep, to digest the food, to rest tired body and tortured brain. Not enough time to think once in a while of health and strength and happiness and a long and useful life. A widow and orphans left to mourn. A big estate that under the dissecting knife of the executor falls all to pieces. 'Tis the story of thousands of business men in life reputed wealthy and successful. It is a story that is unnecessary—need not be.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery if resorted to occasionally will keep a man or woman in good health. It goes to the roots of things. It tunes up the strings of life and makes them vibrate to the music of good health. It makes the appetite keen, the digestion good, the blood pure, and the nerves strong. Then ill-health is an impossibility, and work is a pleasure. Thouands say so, "Your 'Golden Medical Discovery' has been a great physician to our family," writes Mr. Ira 8. Foust, of Naylor, Ripley Co, Mo. "My wife's father had Bright's Disease. His water was almost pure blood. We got a bottle of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and it did him so much good that he tried another and then a third, and the fourth entirely cured him."

a one, indeed, that he married her formally, having divorced all his other wives. She remained a Christian to the last, and after her consort's death, in 1839, she retired to a beautiful villa on the Bosphorus, where she spent her widowhood under the name of "Mme, de Martinique." Her eldest son became the Sultan Abdul Mejid, and her grandsons were the late and present Sultans, Murad V, an Adbul Hamid II.

Mahmoud II, consort of the cl-devant Mile. Bazillais was one of the best and most energetic sovereigns that modern Turkev has known. It was he who first introduced the customs of civilized courts at Constantinople, and placed the Turkish diplomatic service upon a proper footing. May we not ascribe some, at least, of these tendencies toward civilization to the influence of Clara Bazillais, girl friend of Josephine de la Pagerie, whose hand the mulatto fortune teller read so skillfully in faroff Martinique?

On June 24, 1859, the day of the battle of Solferino, toward 4 o'clock in the evening, an order was given to take the heights of Cavreana, and especially Mt. Foutana, which had been for several hours the theater of bloody and underlied contests.

hours the theater of bloody and unde-cided contests. A company separated from the regiment preceded by its two trumpeters. They sounded the well-known air of the Casquette. Bullets were sweeping the company, whose ranks reformed after each dis-charge, and the two trumpeters mount-ing always and playing that air, whose piercing notes dominated the fire of the musketry and the detonations of the artillery. Nothing stopped them. In the right hand they held their trumpet and sounded as though enraged. "Have you seen the casquette, the casquette?"

"Have you seen the casquette, the casquette?

"Have you seen—"

All at once a cloud of dust and smoke enveloped them and hid them from sight. The air of "Casquette" was no longer heard. A shell had fallen. Its explosions had many victims among the company, and the two trumpeters had certainly fallen! Several moments passed, then two men rose. They were wounded, but they pressed on, the trumpeters at their lips, and again the famous refrain was heard.

At one of the night attacks directed against Dantzig, in 1807, Fortenas, a chasseur of the Second Light Infantry, marching as a scout, at some distance before his battalion, fell into a column of the enemy. The Russian commander placed a pistol at his breast, threatening to kill him if he said a word, and called out in French, "Do not fire; we are Frenchmen."

Fortenas comprehended that his silince would cause his regiment to fall into an ambuscade, and he cried out with all his force, "Fire, my captain, These are Russians," then fell, a bullet in his brain.

dock, recently related a remarkable instance of a dog's affection for his kind.

It was during the war, when the Murfree family lived near Murfreesboro, Tenn. The children owned two dogs, a great St. Bernard named Hugo, and a tiny white poodle, Fleece. The two were inseparable companions, and whereever Hugo's dignified self appeared, there gamboled beside him the absurd bundle of curls and wool. It was Landseer's picture of Dignity and Impudence in life. Hugo looked with anxious solicitude after Fleece if the little fellow ran away, which he frequently did, and never gave it up until he brought Fleece home again in safe conduct.

Battles were raging all around them and one night the firing was so near and incessant that no one slept.

The next morning Hugo and Fleece were missing, and, while the children searched for them, Hugo wearly walked through the gate, carrying poor little Fleece's dead body.

He walked to his mistress and laid his burden gently down at her feet, them with a look of unutterable grief laid himself down beside it, nor could they coax, nor drive him away. Little Fleece's white coat was bloodstained. A stray bullet had ended his happy little life, and the children wept over the sorrows of war, realizing as never before what it meant. They had a most elaborate funeral and buried Fleece with military honors, with his body wrapped in a flag, and they marched to the grave to the beat of a toy drum, with Hugo, who followed close, as chief mourner. When the little mound, flower-covered and draped with a flag, was finised, Hugo laid himself down across the triny grave and refused to be comforted. He would neither eat nor drink, and the next morning they found the great fellow stiff and cold in death, still faithfully guarding the mound that covered his dear little friend. His great, loving heart was broken with grief.

It Was Permanent,

Carried on a cot from her home at Fillmore, Cal., Mrs. J. Randolph is bidden a sad farewell by her friends. At Los Angeles strong men carry her in their arms to the English and German Expert Specialists in the Byrne building, where her wonderful recovery began. Mrs. J. Randolph of Fillmore, Cal., is a bright, intelligent widow of 35 and the mother of three children. Since the death of her husband she has supported her family on the revenues of a diary ranch operated by her oren hands. About a year ago Mrs. Randolph began to fail in health, and soon after began to spit up blood in large quantities. At one time she spat up a teacupful in one hemorrhage. Her health failed rapidly and night sweak, loss of flesh, fever, terrible cough and digestive troubles soon carried her to the lowest ebb of vitality. She had lost sixty pounds in five months and was bedridden and hopeless. Her triends said she wouldn't reach Los Angeles alive. The recovery of this woman is the most from the office of the English and German Expert Specialists to 324 S. Broadway, and these specialists to the respect and confidence of all honest men and women who pity the misfortunes of their fellow beings. Mrs. Randolph kers Randolph left her bed and walked out into God's free air and sunshine. No one could believe it, it seemed like a dream that clings to us long after our eyes are open. But there she was, her eyes beaming with joy and gratitude as she told again and again how wonderful it all was, and what a blessing it was that God guided her to the English and German Expert Specialists, who gave her back her life and seed. But there she was, her eyes beaming with joy and them helpless, homeless orphans, dependent upon a stranger's charity to care for a loved mother was indeed a touching sight. This is the story of Mrs. Randolph's recovery. She will be glad to tell you more about it if you call upon her or write. This means, of course, without any damage to the building itself and that the very convenience. building itself, and that the very orna-ments on the mantelpieces, the brica-brac in the cabinets, will in no way a-brac in the cabinets, will in no way be disturbed, that the window glass will not be even cracked, and that the home life of the family occupying the moving house will be undisturbed. Such is absolutely the fact. It is not necessary for the occupants of the buildings to temporarily change their quarters; to take the castors off the bedsteads, nor to pack up all the perishable articles in the house. It is on record that an old tall clock which was in a house that was moved in Westchester country, N. Y., never stopped running at all during never stopped running at all during progress of removal. On the other mover's capabilities as far as weight is nover's capabilities as far as weight is concerned. The Brighton Beach Hotel, which was placed on 150 flat cars and noved 600 feet, weighed 5000 tons. The veight of the recently-moved railroad tation at Mott Haven, N. Y., is 1700 ons. This building was composed enirely of brick and stone, and the weight is very unequally distributed, a central tower alone weighing 500 tons. To be frank, these feats take all the wonderment out of the raising of the pyramids and obelisks, inasmuch as the most primitive tools are used by as the most primitive tools are used by the engineers. One house-moves the case very as the most primitive tools are used by the engineers. One house-mover put the case very graphically when he said: "I think the recent moving of that smokestack at Manhanset was a far more wonderful feat than the rais-ing or moving of an obelisk. The obe-lisk, you know, is in one solld piece, and all you have to do is to keep it bal-anced, but the smokestack is built of and all you have to do is to keep it Dai-anced, but the smokestack is built of thousands of bricks held together by cement, which might break apart un-der the least strain. The difference be apparent to everybody BUILDINGS EASY TO MOVE. Inasmuch as the house-mover is not confouned by size or weight, it ructures have been razed to make way for the march of modern improvement. Had they been, posterity would be the wealthier for many a monument of memorable events, the remembrance of which is, after all, the foundation of national honor and pride. The mechanical end of the business is governed by curious hws, of which the mover must take account. For instance, a difference in level of one inch between two sides at the basement of a building may mean a difference of one foe at the top. Now, although this is a fact, and although a moved building rests on series of planks crossing and recrossing one another underneath, yet the building is in no way secured to the plants. ing is in no way secured to the nor are the planks even chi gether. The weight of the hou may seem like an obstacle, is really in this case an assistance, inasmuch as it steadles and presses on the timbers until the latter are almost held together by the attraction of cohesion and move with the building as a unit. The lifting of a building is really so easy and simple that a child could perform the feat, if his efforts were systematically dislings to the track on which the car rested and about one hundred feet distant from the building. Six locomentives, ready to do the pulling, stood on two tracks and coupled together. After passing the blocks last referred to the ropes, twelve in number, converged in two sets of six each, to each of the tracks on which stood a line of three locomotives. Thus, six ropes were hitched to each of the two locomotives standing nearest to the hotel. The scientific feature of this arrangement was the calculation of the scientific feature of this arrangement was the calculation of the scientific feature of this arrangement was the calculation of the scientific feature of the difference in resistance between the gain of the tackle, the direction in which power should be applied and the difference in resistance between the cars that would be hauled by nearly straight ropes and those that would be hauled by ropes more or less transverse in their course. The total weight to be moved was 11,204,000 pounds, of widded into 8,000,000 pounds of hotel, 2,000,000 in the something of a load. However, all the calculations proved to be correct. At the given signal, the hawsers tightened and the engineers attempted to move at Manhanset weighed 100 tons. It was $5 feet high, and was conveyed a distance of $56 feet—quite a feat company to the proved to be correct. At the given signal, the hawsers tightened and the engineers attempted to move and wonderful contempt for great weights. But, as no skyscraper forward. For a moment the wheels "whirred" on the tracks, the ropes and pulleys "sang" and—the big hotel started off on its railroad trip. It moved about as fast as the second hand of a watch, or, as one spectator graphically put it, "at the rate of a mile in two weeks," but it moved. When six feet had been accomplished, men went into the building and examined it. It had not been strained in the least; not even a pane of glass was cracked. It was then moved forward twenty-four feet, and later in the day twenty-four feet more. In the course of three days the whole distance, 595 feet, was accomplished. As the building is 466 feet long, 210 feet wide, and is covered with towers, which make the distribution of the weight very unequal, the feat can be said to have been truly gigantic, and worthy to rank among the great engineering feats of the world. The moving cost was $25,000.

MOVING A RAILROAD STATION

WEIGHING 1700 TONS.

Yet, smaller buildings have been moved which, in proportion, presented greater difficulties, and for their sizes greater weights. The station at Mott Haven, N. Y., is composed of brick and stone, extending out in bays and covered ways in a manner which seriously interferes with uniform weight. It is the kind of building which would be badly damaged by an earthquake. It is 85 feet long and 35 feet deep. It weighs 1700 tons. An eighty-foot tower attached alone weighs 500 tons. Yet this building was lifted up on Jackscrews, and fourteen men moved it fifty feet in four and one-half days. Crossbeams were extended under the building, and were allowed to rest on two tracks or ways, which were simply beams of greater length than the ones under the floor, and thoroughly lubricated. Behind the station a number of posts, secured to the hack by means of 'chains, served as abutments for the jackscrews, as the jackscrews pushed the station forward the abutments were moved forward also, so that the screws always had a solid backing against which to work. The jub thus became exceedingly simple. Almost the same operation was gone through with in moving the old brick church at Sailors' Snug Harbor, on Staten Island. The ferry house of the Brocklyn City Railroad was also moved in this manner, except that it was moved in an oblique direction. This was accomplished by providing the tracks timbers with guides. The ferry house now stands 140 feet westward and 25 feet northward of its criginal site. It is now seventeen inches lower than its former level. It is a brick structure 50 x110 feet in extent. HOW A HOUSE IS RAISED.

HOW A HOUSE IS RAISED.

The process of raising a house is interesting. If it is a frame house, the chimneys are given special attention. Two holes are cut through the base of each chimney, and beams are pushed through and allowed to extend all the way across the house and in such a position that the cellar celling joists will cross them. Enough beams are put way across the house and in such a position that the cellar celling joists will cross them. Enough beams are put through in this manner to thoroughly support the joists. Then two heavy timbers are crossed under the beams so as to catch up the ends. Under these again more timbers are crossed, and the latter again are made to rest on long, straight timbers, which are to be used for tracks; all this if the house is at the proper level. If not, jackscrews must be employed to raise or lower it. The screws generally rest on platforms, which are made by taking short lengths of timbers and piling them in pairs crosswise on one another until the desired height is reached. Two timbers are then set close together and a hole in them is fitted to the end of the screw. The other end of the screw bears up against the joists of the building. Thus, if the bearing of the screw is not great enough, it is only necessary to add more cross-timbers underneath. Now, to raise the building. Screws will lift, say, ten tons each, and will be placed at distances of five feet apart all around the building. Each screw carries a slow thread and has two holes in it near the top, crossing each other. Into these are to be inserted the crowbars which turn the screws. When all is ready, men station themselves at every other screw, and, inserting their crowbars, give the screw a quarter turn. Each man then passes on to the screw next ahead of him and gives that a quarter-turn. They keep on doing this, working around and around the building raising or lowering it gradually until it is on the required level. The timbers are then inserted, as explained above, and the house made ready to

The Jewish School

for Practical Farming.

[Contributed to The Times.]

TODAY, June 13, the National Farm School will be opened with appropriate ceremonies, and tomorrow its first session begins. This remarkable institution is located near Doylestown, Pa., twenty-five miles from Philadelphia. It consists of a farm of 122 acres on which a commodious school building has just been erected, besides large barns, springhouse and farmer's dwelling. The land is of that fertility for which Bucks county has been long noted, well-wooded and well-watered. No better location could have been selected, for it offers all of the advantages of a model farm, and is near one of the largest markets in the world.

The purpose of the National Farm School is both noble and timely. The association which has founded it was formed by Rabbi Joseph Krauskopf of Philadelphia, one of the most progressive of American religious leaders. He accounts for the origination of the idea, while walking over the grassy slopes of the farm, as follows: "You know, I went to Russia in 1894 to inquire into the condition of the Jews to the interior, where they might engage in agricultural life. I found that impossible, but in conversation with Tolstol, he said: "Why don't you attempt work of that kind in your great land?" This gave me much food for thought. When I returned in the fall. I talked the matter over with my friends and resolved upon founding this school."

But Dr. Krauskopf did more than in the started to raise the necessary funds, and to this end lectured all through the country, from Philadelphia to San Farneisco, and from Boston to San Antonio. In this way he has raised some $25,000, besides having almost 1000 members paying annual dues of from $5 to $10 toward the running expenses, and today when the school is opened it will start without owing a dollar, with every convenience dues of from $5 to $10 toward the running expenses, and today when the school is opened it will start without owing a dollar, with every convenience and modern appliance for scientific farming. The aim is to make this a training school for young men and women, fitting them to become practical and scientific agriculturists. While primarily intended to reach the Jews, and lead them back to agricultural pursuits, the school will be non-sectarian, admitting those of other creeds who seek the training there offered. In no sense a local movement, it counts its supporters and founders all over the United States and Canada, thus making it even more than a national school.

The pupils will be accepted only after showing considerable proficiency in common-school work. The projected course of study is to extend through four years. During the summer months, from April 1 until October 1, the pupils will be taught practical farming. They will take part, under the guidance of the superintendent, in all the work done upon the farm. During the six winter months they will be taught the theory of farming, and all that pertains there to, such as chemistry, botany, geofogy, etc. There will also be a general course of education as part sof the winter curriculum. Dairies, green, houses, hothouses, etc., will be erected, and all the branches of farming will be theroughly taught. A superintendent and his wife, who have been at the head of a similar institution, have been engaged, and there will he to delay in the deal. Will be in, and demanders, possible and demanders and the second of the control o instruction during the summer in practice and in theory by lectures during the winter. The "Steele" stock farm adjoins the "model farm" on Another side, and it, too, will serve as an auxiliary of the National Farm School.

The accommodations prepared for the school are both comfortable and modern. The house is built substantially of stone, and is 120 feet long by 30 feet deep. The rooms are airy and spacious, furnished neatly and comfortably. The furnishings have been donated by individuals from all over the country. One gentleman furnishes the large sitting-room at an expense of of $500, another attends to the library adjoining. One lady sends dozens of towels, another sends the linens, and still another the kitchen utensils. The house, facing the south, looks out upon beautiful, rolling fields of grain. The Reading railroad runs through the farm, offering excellent facilities for shipping, while on the north and east the cold winds of winter are shut off by dense woods. Five acres of orchards are already there, and the farm lies ready for the eager brains and ready hands of its pupils. The affairs of the school are to be administered by an executive board. In addition there is an "auxiliary national board."

When asked if he thought that the Jews would take up the idea and send their children to the farm school, Dr. Krauskopf replied: 'The love of agriculture is innate with the Jew. Disraeli's prophecy is being fulfilled now that the laws of the nations are permitting Israel to return to the fields and vineyards. Let the Israelite but come in contact with mother earth and he feels his old love reawakening for agricultural pursuits. In Palestine the colonies are thriving. At Odessa I saw agreat and flourishing agricultural school for the Jews. In the interior of Russia 30,000 Jews have turned a treeless wilderness into fertile fields. In the Argentine Republic thousands of Jewish farmers are thriving. In New Jersey the Jewish colonies are gradually taking root. And it is the object of our school it will in it

Wilmington.

FROM ONE OF THE OLD-TIMERS.]

HERE was at Wilmington, on Sun-day, June 6, a remarkable meeting, remarkable for the personnel of a large number of the assembled multitude, and for the cause of the assembling. I can think of no event but the funeral of an old-timer that would bring together so many of that class, bring together so many of that class, which proves the survival of the ties that bound men in the earlier times of California life, with its peculiar fluctuation of successes and reverses, the days of blankets and frying pans, rush and excitement, scenes dear to the days of blankets and frying pans, rush and excitement, scenes dear to the memory of the mere remnant of that great army of a few decades past.

The occasion was the death of Tom Hays, and never in Los Angeles county will so many old-timers meet again. Everybody knew "Tom Hays." Who ever heard of "Mr. Hays?" On all sides and by all parties it was either plain "Tom" or "Tom Hays."

The Wilmington Enterprise once tried to prefix plain Tom Hays with "Don Tomas Hays" along with Don Benito Wilson, but it wouldn't stick. It was "Tom Hays" still. So closely by long custom had the two become allied it would have seemed cold and formal for any but a stranger to have addressed him as "Mr. Hays," and I have little doubt it would have so appeared to him.

None ever seemed to care or know.

None ever seemed to care or know.

Few men were more widely or more favorably known. When his death was known and his funeral appointed, his compeers from far and near met, and many hearty, fraternal greetings were exchanged by brothers who had not met for years.

He was a typical character of the class of men that built up and maintained the (now) old town of Wilmington. A town as peculiar for unique characteristics of its own as the different personalities it represented. There were many striking customs in the 1000 to 1200 population, the representatives of almost all nationalities and sections of the United States. But still they were all Wilmingtonians, and along certain lines stood together almost to a man. It was the last place to recognize the 5 cent piece. The county records will show few, if any, bills for burying paupers, though they died there. If a pauper died in Wilmington Bob Garret was there to make his coffin and Jim Eddy, while he lived, to dig a grave. All hands chipped in and raised $25 for expenses—the regular price.

More money could be raised, with less trouble for any good cause or public improvement than in any place I ever saw. met for years. He was a typical character of the class less trouble for any good cause or public improvement than in any place I ever saw.

If any of its citizens, no difference who he was or of what nationality, was in distress, all were ready to give comfort and relief. Ever ready to build and adorn churches, they may have demurred somewhat to attending them, but were always ready with the preacher's salary.

Along some lines they were the best to of people I ever came in contact with, with some bad habits, from the results of which they were the principal sufferers. The great enemy of Wilmington was its saloons, and the halfellow-well-met, free way in which they spent their money and paid the forfeiture that follows such excesses, financially, morally and physically.

When I remember the otherwise good men I have worked alongside of, and the many kindnesses and favors shown me when I needed them, and the final end of some of these ploneers, I can but wish the whole saloon system was abolished.

But as long as one lives, the old town will hold a warm place in his heart.

In a marked and noticeable way there were as one lives, the old town will note a warm place in his heart. . . In a marked and noticeable way there were almost no class distinctions in a community where education and refinement mingled with ignorance and coarseness. It had no aristocracy, and no "poor white trash." All claimed and accepted as far as was possible, a common man

[Frosno Republican:] Mrs. L. Clare
Davis has taken a position on the Expositor as its associate editor, and I am wishing to extend to her such greeting to the Fresno newspaper fold as what is left of me after this run of weather can extend. For if she and I now are to labor on steemed contemporaries, time was when we worked on the same paper. It fell to my lot to edit her copy when first she began to write for the Stockton Mail as "The Mail's Girl." She was new at the work then, and I used to "cuss" dolefully Mail's Girl." She was new at the work then, and I used to "cuss" dolefully over her copy, for she punctuated as women do, using dashes for commas, dashes for semicolons, dashes for periods and an occasional dash just for luck. I used dashes, too in my conversation, as I edited. But there were ideas in the stuff, and it paid for editing. Nor did I use the dashes very long, for she noticed the changes, "caught on," as is her way, and before I knew it, she was as capable of editing my stuff as I was of editing hers; perhaps more so. Today she is one of the best known women writers in the State, and yet it is hardly five years since she tremulously and doubtingly gave her first spasmodic and bedashed communication to the Mail. For it happens thus to the one in whose hands Nature places a pencil and says, "Write." Mrs. Davis has just been elected school director at large of the city of Stockton, and the honor came to her unsought, a testimonial to the esteem and regard which are felt for her in her home city. I am very glad to count this good and talented woman among my friends, and I am bespeaking for her, as best I may, the kindly interest of all Fresnans.

Seth Low for Mayor of New York.

[Kansas City Star:] The selection of Seth Low, president of Columbia. College, as the candidate of the Citizens' Union for the office of Mayor of Greater New York, is a hopeful sign for the future of that ambitious town. Mr. Low represents something more than the scholar in politics. He is a courageous citizen who dares to do anything that is honorable to promote the interests of patriotism and subserve the public good. As Mayor of Brooklyn a few years ago he proved his metal by forcing reform in the face of a desperate and corrupt ring of spoilsmen, and his popularity with the people was demonstrated by his election then, notwithstanding an adverse majority of 25,000. He becomes the candidate for Chief Magistrate of the new metropolis, not as a partisan, but as a patriot, and if the people who favor good government will support him he will be elected. The Tammany organization and the Platt machine, which represent respectively the Democratic and Republican parties, will oppose him with great energy and earnestness, but in Greater New York, as in every other community in this country, the better element is in the majority, and if it will have the courage to unite on so capable and deserving a man as Seth Low for Mayor the new government will be started off on safe lines.

The Doctors who Cure Catarrh.

Thousands of Southern California People Indorse Doctors Shores' Curative Treatment.

Doctors Shores Make Their Method of Treatment Plain to the People So That No One Need Make a Mistake in Seeking Honest and Beneficial Medical Advice.

The Sick Can Avoid the Dangerous Mistake of an Incorrect Diagnosis and of Being Treated for the Wrong Disease by Consulting Doctors Shores.

How the Treatment Cures,

Drs. Shores' new treatment for Catarrh has lifted the darkness and blight of the word "incurable" from thousands of these cases of Catarrh in the Head, Throat, Ears, Bronchial Tubes and Lungs, works its curative action for two

 It reaches every sore spot, from the orifice of the nose to the deepest part of the lungs and stomach, to the innermost recesses of the middle ear.
 Instead of irritating, inflaming and feeding the fires of the disease, it soothes, quiets, heals and curea.

How to Cure Common Catarrh.

How to Cure Common Catarrh.

Here is a patient taking treatment for Catarrh of the Head, under Drs. Shores' masterly taeatment. He breathes the soothing medication through his nostrils, and the nasal channels open up, the stuffed-up feeling in the head leaves and he can breathe naturally through the nose again. The dull pains across the front of the head fade away, and the nasal membrane is soothed until the inflammation and soreness are all gone. The bad odor of the breath passes away, and the lost sense of smell returns. The dropping in the throat is checked, the nose does not stop up towards night any more, the sneezing and snuffing have ceased, and the discharge from the nose grows less and less, and finally stops altogether. The disease has been checked and eradicated from the system before it ever reached his throat. It has not been driven down into his throat or into his lungs or into his ears, as is so often done by other treatments.

Symptoms of Catarrh of the Head and Throat.

The head and throat become diseased from neglected colds, causing Cat arrh when the condition of the blood predisposes to this condition.

Is the breath foul? Is the voice husky?
Do you spit up slime?
Do you ache all over? Do you snore at night? Do you blow out scabs?
Is the nose stopped up?
Does your nose discharge?
Does the nose bleed easily?
Is this worse toward night? Does the nose itch and burn? Is there pain in front of head?
Is there pain across the eyes?
Is there tickling in the throat?
Is your sense of smell leaving?
Do you hawk to clear the throat? Is the throat dry in the morning? Are you losing your sense of taste? Do you sleep with your mouth open? Does your nose stop up toward night?

How to Cure Catarrh in the Head and Throat.

Here is another patient who had Catarrh in the head. He caught cold after Here is another patient who had Catarrh in the head. He caught cold after cold, and the disease spread down into the throat. Under Drs. Shores treatment he breathes and drinks in the disease-banishing medication. It bathes the membranes of his head and throat. The soreness of the head and throat becomes less and the desire to hawk and spit is disappearing, the sense of taste is returning and the voice again becomes soft and melodious. There is no more gagging and vomiting in the morning. No longer does every exposure to the weather result in a stuffed-up throat that becomes sore and inflamed, and no longer does he find his throat and tongue dry as chips when he wakes from an unrefreshing sleep.

Symptoms of Catarrh of the Bronchial Tubes.

This condition often results from catarrrh extending from the head and throat, and, if left unchecked, extends down the windpipe into the bronchia tubes, and in time attacks the lungs.

Have you a cough?
Are you losing flesh?
Do you cough at night?
Have you a pain in side?
Do you take cold easily? Is your appetite variable?
Have you stitches in side?
Do you cough until you gag?
Do you raise frothy material? Do you raise frothy material?
Do you cough on going to bed?
Do you cough in the morning?
Are you low-spirited at times?
Do you spit up yellow matter?
Is your cough short and hacking?
Do you spit up little cheesy lumps?
Have you a disgust for fatty foods?
Is there a tickling behind the palate?
Do you feel you are growing weaker?
Is there a burning pain in the throat?
Have you a pain behind the breastbon Do you cough worse night and morning Do you have to sit up nights to get breath?

How to Cure Bronchial Catarrh.

Here is another patient who was always sensitive to the weather. He contracted Catarrh of the Head, and it passed to his throat, then down the windpipe and into the bronchial tubes. He coughed at night so that he could not sleep; there was a pain behind his breastbone and under the shoulder blades. When he coughed he brought up a frothy, gray ish material streaked with blood. He lost appetite and strength. He tried cough syrups and different medicines to no avail. Under Drs. Shores' treatment he now breathes in with full inspirations the vast rungs and acathing medicine. The same spots along the prophlat tubes. the restoring and soething medicine. The sore spots along the bronchial tubes heal, the cough ceases, the pain leaves. The appetite and the strength return. He is again a well and happy man.

How to Cure Catarrhal Deafness.

Here is another patient who for years has been a sufferer. Every fresh cold seemed to stay longer than former colds, and he noticed that his ears got stopped up and his hearing became duller and duller, and there were ringing and buzzing noises in the ears. The catarrh had passed upward and backward from the throat along the eustachian tube leading from the throat into the ear. He had visited throat doctors and ear doctors and catarrh doctors without relief. In this condition he begins Drs. Shores' treatment and we find him inhaling the never-failing medication, and soon he notices a change. The noises in the ears stop, there is no more discharge, the hearing gets better, and finally the tubes of the ears open up and something seems to give way in the head. His hearing has completely returned. No wonder he considers the result a marvel,

In harmony with Drs. Shores' policy of taking the sick into their confidence as to their grand treatment for catarrh, today these great specialists publish in full their Symptom Blank, by means of which the sick in the guiet of their own homes may study the characteristic symptoms of their ailments and judge for themselves the nature of their malady. Many chronic cases of disease are only chronic, and baffle the skill of doctors because the doctors do not understand, or properly treat the disease. They fail to recognize its catarrhal origin, and do not strike at the root of the trouble, and by removing the cause, make a permanent cure possible. This is just where the curative value of Drs. Shores' treatment is made plain.

In presenting this Symptom List Drs. Shores concede the fact that it has been frequently pilfered and used as a bait by medical imitators, who bodily steal this Symptom List and unblushingly present it as their own. The public will recognize this as Drs. Shores' Symptom List, and the sick in search of advice should consult the originator and not the imitator.

Real Doctors vs. Mythical Doctors.

An important advantage to the sick in treating with Doctors Shores is that patients can always consult with these doctors in person, for Doctors Shores are flesh and blood realities and can always be found in their consulting rooms. They will personally diagnose your case, and personally give you full advice about any catarrhal chronic disease. In treating with Doctors Shores you consult with real doctors, get real medicines, and the advantages of real scientific skill. Doctors Shores' wonderful treatment is the result of years of study, experience and scientific investigation, and their searching diagnosis in its forensic truthfulness, is as fixed as the laws of Medes and Persians, in infallibly giving a correct and exact picture of your physical condition, the inroads of catarrhal disease, and the true methods of cure. The highest medical science and the widest experience is the basis of Doctors Shores' successful methods of treatment. They do not diagnose disease by aid of a rabbit's foot, by the occultations of the planets or by of recognized medical skill, and aided by the latest scientific appliances and medicines of their own manufacture of known strength and purity, they infallibly cure all cases placed on treatment by them.

Drs. Shores' Laboratories.

Doctors Shores are the only Specialists on the Pacific Coast who have their own analytical and manufacturing laboratories under charge of a registered physician and chemist. Doctors Shores make all their analyses indicated in the diagnosis of disease, and have the latest scientific appliances for the manufacture of their own medicine from roots, barks, herbs and gums, Thus they know the exact strength of all medicines used, and do not depend on stale, adulterated drugs that have lain for years on cheap druggists' shelves' neither do these careful specialists rely on the imaginary virtues of sugar pills or alleged medicated tablets so often used to deceive the credulous. What Drs. Shores' $5.00 Rate Means.

In treating with Drs. Shores you know just what you spells and conjurations, but they will graphically trace the have to pay. There is no sliding scale of prices and their origin and progress of your disease by the grand searchlight fee is $5.00 per month for all diseases, which covers everything, including all medicines, care and attention. Drs. Shores were the first to introduce this low rate some years ago, justly conceiving the idea that the people paid too much money to the doctors, and feeling also that humanity prompted them to give the results of their study, experience and skill to the sick at the lowest figure compatible with genuine and effective treatment and medication. Now remember, all you have to pay is $5.00 per month for full treatment, care and attention, and all medicines, consultation absolutely free.

LITERARY COMMENT.

Stephen Crane.

Writing of Stephen Crane as a war correspondent the Chap Book of June 1 says:

"Stephen Crane's war correspondence from Thessaly would probably have been a good deal better if he could have kept his eyes shut. Unfortunately, it was his business to keep them open and the result was a conflict between his imagination and his eyesight. Reading his letters, we see regretfully that the eyesight won; that instead of an electric impressionist sketch of battle, worthy of the author of "The Red Badge of Courage," he forced himself to give us an accurate, colorless description of what was actually passing beneath him. We miss the lurid touches, the flashing adjectives that two years ago lit up war for us as though by lightning. Mr. Crane imagining a battle is a writer, an artist describing a battle, he is merely a reporter, and not, it must be added, an Stephen Crane's war correspondence

It it poet's passion is real, if the It it poet's passion is real, if the It it poet's passion is real, if the poet's passion is real, if the poet's passion is real, if he has sought to invoke the feeling by the mere use of words and trops the mere words and trops the mere words and trops the words and trops time like our, passion lags; art leads; the poets are more in love with poetry than with things; the heat and the desire which should be spontaneous and from within, are sought to be developed by the mere friction of words and fancies from without. In fact, the great trouble with our young poets is that they want to write poetry. Their prayer is, "O Lord, what shall I do to be a poet?" When their prayer is, "O Lord, give me deeper religiousness and a more fervent love of Thy works," there will be some hope for them. The muse is not partial to those who so industriously woo her, but to those who think some noble thought or experience some noble emotion. She cannot be run down or cornered. She comes to those whose eye is single and who love discontinuations.

There is no objection to art for art's sake—if a great, potent, quickening spirit is revealed or brought to bear upon our spirit, as in Shakespeare. But usually the only thing revealed is art, or artifice, craftsmanship, as in Swinburne. Poe almost justifies himself in "The Raven." It means nothing; it is simply a conjuring with words and rhythmic effects, but there are glimpses of a strong spirit back of it. The poet, need not have a lesson or a message for us, but he must, at least, lay a quickening finger upon us and break new grounds in our minds and spirits. Shakespeare has no message for us but shakespeare whitman, no message but Whitman. The lesser poets have no message for us but art—the pleasure of nice verbal effects. the joy of singing, creates for the joy of creating. It is sufficient unto itself, and does not need to draw upon an artificial reservoir. Any one might write a novel with a purpose, but to write a great novel without a purpose, to roam free and at ease in all fields, to take the whole of life for your province and draw out and interpret the universal—that is another matter.

A man like Poe is of the true poet type, undoubtedly, but his contribution is unimportant, because there was not enough of him; he does not cut deep. There is a mastery in him not in Longfellow, but Longfellow will outlive him because he was a winning, genial personality, and his works are sweet and wholesome. Poe's mastery is over the elements of verse, not over the elements of life or spirit. He compels my admiration, but does not command my love. He is strong as a craftsman, but not primarily as a man. He is a great artificer, but not a great creator. Stevenson had a great talent, a finer literary equipment than Scott, and yet Scott is the mountain. Stevenson is the grassy fell. Scott was a great nature: Stevenson, a fine nature. Are the men of the large type all gone—the race of giants ended? All the new men are "light-weights," wonderful craftsmen, but not great natures. The last of our giants, such as they were, died with Holmes. Ruskin and Spencer still hold out in England, but are not the new men over there, as here, all of a smaller, finer type? Watson's poems are fine, but are they great?

A Literary Monument.

The literary monument of the late Archbishop of Canterbury is his important work. "Cyprian, His Life, His Times, His Work." which is to be published immediately by D. Appleton & Co., with an introduction by Bishop Potter. Canon Gore has said that he does not believe there is so much theological or moral illumination to be gained from any study outside Holy Scripture as from the great theologians who are called the "fathers." Dr. Benson speaks of Cyprian as "a powerful and fascinating personality," who left a theory of the church's life which is still "a living theory." Bishop Potter writes: "Cyprian beheld Christendom vexed by questions which were not new when he came to Carthage, and which are as vital in their interest and as far-reaching in their importance now as then. The great question of Christian unity, to a deep and anxious interest in which the Christian world is more than ever keenly awake today, was a question which Cyprian treated with a large vision and in temper of generous comprehension which in some aspects of them may well surprise the modern; while with the papal claims of his own time he dealt with vigor and conclusivenes." Bishop Potter adds that "to those who knew the author and his great career he will be revealed in the pages of this book in some of his most engaging characteristics."

Lay Sermons.

H OW many ways Our Father has of speaking to us, indicating His will toward us as plainly as if He spoke to us with the divine lips of the Son of God. Are we disheartened and discouraged, some lovely flower, beautiful in its glory of color and fragrance tiful in its glory of color and tragrance speaks to us of His presence, and abounding care—"for if God so cares for the lily of the field, how much more shall He care for you, O, ye of little faith?" I have sometimes felt very far from God, when He would seem to me like a great and terrible Presence that I could not understand—an infinite Being sitting in the majesty of the Heavens, so different from our finite selves that the heart would say, "I cannot understand Him, how shall I draw near unto Him?" Then would come to me the thought, I do not need to understand anything more than His to understand anything more than His great love—His infinite mercy and His willingness to save. Let me trust that, and all will be well. Then into my heart would some such a sense of God's presence, such a realization of tender, enveloping love that all sense of loneliness vanished and my heart grew glad in the fullness of life about me. The flowers, so delicately fashloned, so glorious in coloring and so sweet me. The flowers, so delicately fashioned, so glorious in coloring and so sweet in its delicious perfume, was voiceful of a care that, is all-pervading, of a love that never forgets.

And how many times when oppressed by some burden of sorrow which it seemed that I could not bear, I have said, "I will take all of this to my Heavenly Father, and I will leave it with Him. I am not going to worry over it any more, but leave it at the feet of the Cross." But human nature is very weak and we are prone to pick up our burdens again after we have laid them down, and so I would find that I gathered them up again, and the imp of worry have laid them down, and so I would find that I gathered them up again, and the imp of worry would beset me once more. Then I said this battle must be fought out. Shall I dishoner God by refusing to trust Him? I have taken my cares and anxieties to Him, can I not feel that all will be well if I leave them there? I will leave them in God's hands. These were by no means what the world calls great sorrows, but rather the vexing cares of life, its misunderstandings and worries and the petty trials such as come to us all, but which pull at the heartstrings and which are so hard to put from us. But every time that I found my thoughts dwelling upon them I would say, these are things that I have taken to my Heavenly Father, I have nothing more to do with them, and soon I was able to put them all from me, and to be at peace again.

Do you not think that this is a good thing to do, dear reader? Our Infinite Friend! is He not as worthy of trust as the dear earthly friends we love, and is He not more willing and better able to care for and help us?

Oh, for more trust in Our Father, for that large faith in Him which is love, and is He not more willing and better able to care for and help us?

Oh, for more trust in Our Father, for that large faith in Him which is unquestioning and which makes us feel secure. This will constitute one of the joys of Heaven—our overflowing faith in the Father whose we are and who is ready to give us all things. Trials are sometimes God's best gifts to us. They are always such when they draw us nearer to Him, when they lift us out from self, awaken our sympathies for others, and put us in tender touch with God's suffering ones. What a magnificent, fully-rounded character was wrought out of Job's sufferings. No man could have been visited with heavier griefs than his, yet down through the ages come to us his words so full of triumphant trust and undying faith—"Yea, though He slay me, yet will I trust in Him." Such faith in God as that would lift us so far above sorrow that it never could crush us. Infinite love would soften every blow, as we laid hold of Our Father's outstretched hand. We should hear His voice saying, "It seems dark to you now, my child, but by and by you shall see the light, then will my love for you be clear. Trust me and wait."

And can we not do that, saying the While we are in sorrow."
"Himself hath done it! Can it then be aught
Than full of wisdom, full of tenderest love?
Not one unneeded sorrow will He send,
To teach this wandering heart no more to

"Himself hath done it! Yes, although severe May seem the stroke, and bitter be the cup, 'Tis His own hand that holds it, and I know 'He'll give me grace to drink it meekly up. 'Himself hath done it! Oh, no arm but His Could ere sustain beneath earth's dreary lots; But while I know He's doing all things well, My heart His loving kindness questions not. 'Himself hath done it! He who's searched me through.

Sees how I clave to earth's ensnaring ties,
And so He breaks each reed on which my soul
Too much for happiness and joy relies.

'Himself hath done it! Then I fain would will in all things evermore be done,' though that will remove whom best Ven though that will remove whom love.
While Jesus lives I cannot be alone. Himself hath done it! Precious, precious words. Himself, my Father, Savior, Brother, Friend, Vhose faithfulness no variation knows, Who having loved me loves me to the end. And when in His eternal presence blest, I at His feet my crown immortal cast, at His feet my crown immortal cast, gladly own with all His ransomed saints Himself hath done it—all, from first to last.

Sara Bernhardt was lately anxious to get possession of a play by Jean Richepin called "La Martyre." It was accepted at the Theater Francais some time ago, but the author grew weary of waiting for the production and demanded that the manuscript be returned him for Mme. Bernhardt's use. The matter was compromised by a promise to act the play early next autumn at the Theater Francais. Not only the actors, but the authors as well, frequently grow weary of the deliberate methods of the house of Moliere. A play may be delayed in production any time from three to five years.

"Fredegonde," the new tragedy by Dupont, which has been produced in fine style at the Theater Francais, Paris, with Mile. Dudlay, Mounet-Sully and Paul Mounet in the principal roles, is said to be the dismalest and bloodlest play of modern times. The cruel queen of Chilperic has committed a dozen or so murders before the curtain rises. She is in good killing "form" then. She arranges with her lover, Lother, for the assassination of Chilperic's son, Merovee. She tries to throttle an ingenue to death. Two recent curlosities in theatrical enterprise are reported from Europe. They both belong to Paris, where originated the free theaters as well as the "White Theater," and various other ecentric establishments devoted to the drama in one form or another. One is a new municipal theater at which standard and other classical dramas are standard and other classical dramas ar standard and other classical dramas are to be acted. The theater is to be under the control of the city, if, indeed, it ever comes into existence at all, and its purpose is to supply the drama either at very low prices, or for nothing. It is said that the undertaking can be successfully carried out with a loss of only $200,000 a year. The other new scheme is a theater devoted to the production of dramas intended to treat of the condition of women in France, and to raise the standard of their present situation. This means not so much of the condition of women in France, and to raise the standard of their present situation. This means not so much the right to the suffrage, as the freedom of women from all social and legal restraints which are imposed on them and not on men. Several plays with this purpose in view have been acted at the free theaters already. This plan, like the other, is still in the air, and many remain there.

The fact that Mrs. Langtry's long-sought-for divorce has been granted to her without exciting any but the feeblest spark of interest in the minds of the public that for years followed the doings of the famous English beauty with feverish interest, again illustrates the fleeting quality of all earthly fame, says the New York Journal. When Mrs. Langtry first came to New York, bringing with her the glamour of nobility and royalty, and chaperoned by Mrs. Labouchere, she could not appear on Fifth avenue or Broadway without running the risk of being mobbed, so eager were the American people to behold her face, and when, by reason of the burning of the Park Theater on the very eve of what was to have been her debut, her first appearance was postponed, habit-ual play-goers went about their accus-tomed duties moodly and nervously, counting the hours that must elapse before they could see her face. Mrs. Langtry, who has never been called a fool, contrived & keep herself promi-nently in the public mind for a great many years, and the harvest that she reaped by so doing was enormous, but now her glory is departed, and neither here nor in England will she ever com-mand general attention again.

How to Be a Hero.

BUTED TO THE TIMES. BY VERY REV. FRANK J. MAL-LETT. Dean of St. Matthew's Cathedral, Laramie, Wyo.

Now when Daniel knew the writing was signed, he went into his house; and his windows being open in his chamber toward Jerusalem, he kneeled upon his knees three times a day, and prayed, and gave thanks before his God, as he did aforetime.—[Daniel vi, 16. Some vices are hoary with age, but they show no signs of decreptitude; fact, they seem to enjoy per-in fact, they seem to enjoy perpetual youth.

Jealousy is as old as man himself, but no one will deny the vigorous life of this every-day vice, for we suffer from its venomous sting today, just as Daniel did centuries ago. The monster attacks all sorts and conditions of men, in every walk of life; and as soon as a man by dint of hard work or active brain "gets up in the world," the word is passed, "Pull him down." It was just so in the case of Daniel: "Then this Daniel was preferred above the presidents and princes, because an excellent spirit was in him, and the king thought to set him over the whole realm."

We used to hear of a "healthy rivalry," but nowadays, under the com-

realm."

We used to hear of a "healthy rivalry," but nowadays, under the competitive system, you are very apt to find your rival making it exceedingly unhealthy. In the scramble for place or power one is often reminded of the saying of Carlyle, that civilized men, like the aboriginals, are saying literally, "Can I kill thee or canst thou kill me?"

ally, "Can I kill thee or canst thou kill me?"
Daniel had become too great a success, and some people can't stand that—in other people. I know a man who, after helping to "down" a friend of whom he was jealous, said to his victim as a sort of justification of his conduct, "You can't expect to have all happiness."
Daniel was not ony too successfu, but too true, too brave, too competent; an incorruptible statesman who did not fear the face of man. The possession of these qualities made him enemies; it an incorruptible statesman who did not fear the face of man. The possession of these qualities made him enemies; it has often done so in others since. Moreover, this Daniel was of noble birth, and some people don't like that. Then again, he was marked by physical beauty; people have hated others for the possession of that alone. Add to all this the fact that he was a foreigner, and had once been a captive, and you may imagine the railings of jealousy about "this foreign-interloper, Daniel, going up the ladder of fame before his betters."

Last, but not least, Daniel was a strictly religious man. Now that phrase may mean anything or nothing, but Daniel had the thing that has been called "the chief thing about a man"—his religion was of the right kind. Some people think that it is impossible for a politician or statesman to be a religious man in this best sense, but it has been done, and the enemies of Daniel found it out. In their subtlety they used this as their chief weapon against him; they made it their business to watch him in public and private. You can almost hear their stealthy tread, as the eavesdroppers plot to drag him down.

Surely this man was a hero, for he knew of all this, yet did not swerve from his allegiance to God and conscience. After all their scheming and to admit there was only one way of attack, one possible opening, and that, to his eternal credit be it said, was concerning the law of his God. "We shall not find any occasion against this Daniel except"—mark that word—"except we find it against him concerning the law of his God."

His God—what a blessed phrase! My Father, my God; this is the chief end of man to realize for himself the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man. Was this not a splendid record for a politician?

In different countries men have risen to honor as suddenly as Daniel; but of man. Was this not a splendid record for a politician?

In different countries men have risen to honor as suddenly as Daniel; but alas, they have not always retained their moral purity, or integrity, "if," said the great Wolsey, dying, "if I had served my King, He would not have given me over in my gray hairs."

But Daniel could not escape reverses, although he had won with unsullied honor the things we covet most. The plot progresses, and yet God does not interfere. These men hit upon a clever plan, most ingenious and plausible, and it worked well. A decree is artfully obtained that for thirty days no petition should be asked of the gods, or of man, "save of thee, O King." You can imagine the triumphant looks of Daniel's enemies as the King signed what they knew was as sure as a death warrant.

of Commons. Sir Towell Buxton, his coadjutor, prayed earnestly about a certain division, or vote in the House of Commons, and says, "What led to that decision? If ever there was a subject which occupied our prayers, it was this. I sincerely believe that prayer was the cause of that vote."

These were true men, who in an age of doubt dared to believe in and practice prayer. An important lesson we may learn from this narrative is, that the unseen and spiritual in man determine the seen and actual. In a word, Daniel was prepared beforehand for this emergency. By eyears of inward discipline he had learned to subdue the bodily appetites.

Think of the factors in this man's this emergency. By syears of inward discipline he had learned to subdue the bodily appetites.

Think of the factors in this man's greatness of character. He was temperate, a fine specimen of physical manhodd; there is something breezy and inspiring in the phrase "muscular Christianity"—manly religion.

Lastly, remember God never hurries, for He has infinite resources. It is sometimes asked in the presence of colossal and triumphant wrong and injustice, "Where is God? Where is the just Deliverer?" Patience; it is true Daniel finds himself temporarily discomfited, and his enemies victorious. He was dragged to the lions. Well, what of that? God can take care of him. You remember in "Pligrims' Progress" how Christian came suddenly unpleasantly close to a roaring lion, but how on going bravely forward he discovered that the roaring was the worst part of the business, for the lion was chained. The message for us is this: If we would do something faithfully we must believe firmly. Daniel believed, therefore he achieved. Too often we are open to Coleridge's criticism; "You only believe that you believe," Inspiration, strength, comes to those who believe that God is, and that He hears our prayers. Happy is that man of whom the worst that can be said is this: "We find no fault except it be concerning the law of his God."

Dare to be a Daniel,
Dare to stand alone;

Dare to be a Daniel,
Dare to stand alone;
Dare to have a purpose true,
Dare to make it known.

Character founded on such fixed prin-ciples and unswerving devotion to the right as Daniel had will stand the test when the moment for heroic action when the moment for heroic action comes.

It is of such stuff that heroes are made. They may live their lives without the world's applause; they may never have opportunity for signal exhibitions of heroism; yet in the every-day struggle, in their own immediate circle or individual hearts they are heroes every inch. Obscure, unrecognized, such a one glorifies humanity and knows himself a hero strong.

PURPOSE IN LIFE. We must have a distinct purpose in living and we cannot put that purpose too high. A man only becomes what he makes himself, and we rarely reach the goal without exerting every energy.—[Bishop Whittaker, Episcopalian, Philadelphia, Pa.

One of the most encouraging features of a cure made by S.S.S.(Swift's Specific) is its permanency. Of all diseases, it is well known that those of the blood are the most difficult to cure. The medical profession, in fact, have virtually admitted that a real, deepseated blood disease is beyond their skill.

Of course, their admission is not made in so many words, but actions speak louder than words, and their inability to cure, after months and often years of treatment, is sufficient evidence that diseases of the blood cannot be cured by doctors. Their mercurial mixtures, although taken faithfully, only cover up the symptoms of the disease, inducing the patient to feel that he is being cured; but when he is sooner or later seized with stiff joints, pain in the bones, etc., the evidence of the doctor's patchwork is conclusive. Such results cannot be expected from the use of S. S. S. Being purely vegetable, containing no harmful mineral ingredients, it is the only blood remedy which acts on the true principle of forcing the disease from the system, building up rather than tearing down the health. No loss of hair, no stiff joints, no decrepit mercurial wrecks result from the use of S.S.S.

H. L. MYERS. Mr. H. L. Myers, of 100 Mulberry street, Newark, N. J., made the mistake of re-lying upon remedies based upon mineral ingredients, and for the hundreds of dollars which he invested received only disappointment in return. He says:
"I was afflicted with a terrible blood disease, which was in spots at first, but afterwards spread all over my body. These soon broke out into sores, and it is easy to imagine the suffering I enis easy to imagine the suffering I endured.

"Before I became convinced that the doctors could do no good I had spent a hundred dollars, which was really thrown away. I then tried various patent medicines, but they did not reach the disease. When I had finished my first bottle of S.S.S., I was greatly improved and was delighted with the result. The large red splotches on my chest began to grow paler and smaller, and before long disappeared entirely. I regained my lost weight, became stronger, and my appetite greatly improved. I was soon entirely well, and my skin as clear as a piece of glass."

S.S.S. is a sure cure for all manner of blood diseases, and disappointment never results from its use. It is

A CITY OF SCHEMES.

SOME OF THE PROJECTS TO DEVELOP CHEAP POWER AT NIAGARA FALLS.

A Plan to Give Away Electric Power for Manufacturing Uses-The Mather Power Bridge and Love's Unique "Model City"-Tunnel from Niagara to Buffalo to Furnish Power and Drainage. Influence of the Great Work.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

NIAGARA FALLS. June 7. NCE the building of the great to Buffalo this place has been the Mecca of electrical engineers, nventors and men with large schemes of every kind. Those who complain that modern industry is prosaic, sordid, material, should visit Niagara Falls. Surely the voyage of the Argonauts was not more remantle than the at-tempt to subdue this great monster who terrified and awed by his mightly ower. It is interesting, too, to note ow the success of this great undertakg has stimulated men's imaginations that almost every week a newer and nore daring scheme is proposed by en, who, if their boldness in planning is equalled by their ability in execu-tion, will revolutionize the industrial system of the country before—the system of the country before the twentieth century is out of its swadting clothes. As to the natives of the place, they have become so accusimed to listen to plans which would kee away the breath of less advanced minunities that they would look on ithout surprise if somebody were to the in a great establishment for contributions.

INCE the building of the great Niagara electric power plant and the successful transmission of prices somewhat. Meanwhile every one of the great batch of rival schemes prices somewhat. Meanwhile every one of the great batch of rival schemes that has been brought out depends, in its hopes for success, on the possibility of producing power at a less price than the Niagara Falis Power Company can afford. One of the most comprehensive of these plans was advanced last winter by a Buffalo engineer. It provided for the construction of a huge tunnel from Buffalo to Niagarar Falis, which would supply power not only in the city, but along its line. Of course, the cost of such a tunnel would be immensely greater than that of the present power tunnel, but this difficulty was to be done away with by the utilization of the tunnel as a great trunk ewew for Buffalo, the Tonawandas, and other towns along the line which would bear part of the expense of its construction. This plan was the outgrowth of the demand for a new sewerage system for Buffalo, but it is of too stupendous proportions to be likely of early fulfilment.

writing moonbeams into bottled energy. While many of the power and industrial schemes which are launched here are wild and chimerical, it is inevitable that out of the hurly-burly will come results of the greatest importance to the manufacturing and transporting industries of this country. Already there results of the greatest importance to the manufacturing and transporting industries of this country. Already there has sprung up here the wonder city of the world, a great industrial city, but without the lofty chimneys belching great columns of black smoke, which have come to be recognized as the earmarks of the manufacturing community. In Niagara Falls steam power is already obsolete. The wheels move noiselessly, swiftly, and it is only the sight of the accomplished result that calls attention to the work that has been done. And this, the engineers and students of industrial subjects tell us, is a type of the future manufacturing city which is to spring into existence wherever any considerable water power exists, as soon as the revival of ousiness unicks the tightly closed ower exists, as soon as the revival business unlocks the tightly closed offers of capital.

THE PROBLEM OF CHEAP POWER. Two years ago G. W. Ferris, the engineer of Ferris wheel fame, said: "The condition which will determine the relative expansion of towns and cities in the next decade is the presence of water power. The whole problem of electricity is one of cheap generation." This problem of cheap generation is one that engineers everywhere are working at now. Until electricity can be obtained directly from coal, and perhaps even afterward, water power is an inevitable factor in cheap electrical power. It has already been demonstrated that steam cannot compete with it. The Niagara Falls THE PROBLEM OF CHEAP POWER. been demonstrated that steam cannot compete with it. The Niagara Falls Power Company delivers electricity in Buffalo. twenty-six miles away, for $50 per horse power per year. Although Buffalo is close to the great Pennsylvania coal fields, steam costs $36 per horse power. Still, the margin of difference is not great enough to suit the engineers and promoters, and they are at work trying to increase it. In this connection an integesting crop of schemes has been brought out.

CHEAPER POWER COMING.

from Gov. Black's refusal to sign the oill permitting its erection. This plan originated in the brain of Alonzo C. Mather, a Chicago inventor, Mr. ther proposed to utilize thestrong force of the Niagara River at Buffalo to turn of the Niagara River at Buffalo to turn his dynamos, which were to produce some 120,000 horse power. Where the Niagara River leaves Lake Erle its waters sweep along at the rate of over eight miles an hour. A bridge was to be Fuilt across to the Canada side at this point, and this bridge was to be the means of obtaining the power. It was to be an ordinary steel bridge of the cantilever variety, with spans of the means of obtaining the power. It was to be an ordinary steel bridge of the cantilever variety, with spans of 200 feet each. Below the ten spans where the current is strongest there were to be placed ten huge steel wheels, forty feet in diameter and almost two hundred feet in length. Ordinarily these wheels were to project twenty feet above the surface, but they were to be so arranged that they could be raised clear of the water or entirely submerged, if necessary. These great steel water wheels were to be connected by an ingenious arrangement of shafts with the power-house, located close to the shore, on the American side. By building a bridge to serve as a passageway for teams and street-car lines between Buffalo and the Canadian shore, Mr. Mather expected to make his plant nearly self-sustaining, and he claims that he vould be, able to furnish power enough to supply all the present needs of Buffalo, about 90,000 horse power, at a price less than half what the Niagara Falls Power Company is at present receiving. So confident of his ability to do this is he that he stands ready to invest $100,000 of his own money in receiving the first or experiment span. celving. So confident of his ability to do this is he that he stands ready to mompete with it. The Niagara Falls compete with it. The Niagara Falls compete with it. The Niagara Falls compete with it. The Niagara Falls competence with it. The Niagara Falls connection an interesting crop of schemes has been brought out.

CHEAPER POWER COMING.

It is probable that as the present

But all these plans fade into insignificance beside the magnificent dream of William Love which he embodied in the plan of his "model city." Mr. Love is another westerner, imbued with the hustling spirit that has built "boom" towns on the alkali plains. His plan was comprehensive enough, and point towns on the aight plains. This plan was comprehensive enough, and if it were to be carried out it would be unnecessary to build any more cities for some years to come. At present the model city is not imposing in its proportions, consisting of a few houses; the building which holds the offices of the company and one or two factory buildings. But on paper the model city is a wonder of order and magnificance, beside which the beauties of the greatest cities in the world are tawdry. The basis of this, as of the other schemes, was to be Niagara's power, but it was easy to see that Mr. Love and his company would outstrip all their competitors for whereas the Niagara Falls Power Company sells electricity at $30 per horse power, and the other companies proposed to furnish it at $15 and $10 per horse power, and the other companies proposed to furnish it at $15 and $10 per horse power, and the other companies proposed to furnish it at $15 and $10 per horse power, and the other companies proposed to furnish it at $15 and $10 per horse power, and the other companies proposed to furnish it at $15 and $10 per horse power, and the other companies proposed to furnish it at $15 and $10 per horse power, and the other some and the section of power houses to be supplied with machinery, etc., it seems a little difficult to the ordinary person to understand how it was to be done. It is right at this point, however, that the beauty of the model city plan unfolds itself. A brief reference to the accompanying cut will enable the reader to understand it. On the other side of Niagara River extends a ledge of rocks which corresponds in some measure to that over which the river falls. Below this ledge or bluff where the ground breaks away sharply, spreads a level plain reaching to Lake Ontario. This is a pleasant country and one of the most fertile portions of Niagara country, and it is here that the model city was to stand. Mr. Love secured options on 30,000 acres of this farm land, and his answer to the question, "Who pays the bi

BUILDING.

The name Model City was selected as indicative of the city's object, to serve as a model for all others. It was to have fine regular streets and a system of public works, to include a telephone and telegraph system, industrial schools, a permanent exposition building, and other things not usually included under that head. All the wires, conduits, pipes and sewers were to be buried in alleys, so that it would not be necessary to tear up the pavements; there were to be no tenement houses nor saloons. The plan was in every way such a spacious and attractive one that such a spacious and attractive one that many conservative investors waxed enthusiastic over it, and ex-Gov. Flower said, in speaking of the project:

"If that scheme is handled right, it will mean a city of 2,000,000."

Though these various schemes have here been described in the past tense, their promoters would resent with indignation the insinuation that their pet projects were dead. Still it is likely to dignation the insinuation that their pet projects were dead. Still it is likely to be some time before there are any cities of 2,000,000, or any electric power bridges, or any tunnels twenty miles long in this part of New York State. He would be indeed rash who has seen the wonderful power rolling past the doors of these budding cities on the Nisgara frontier, and would yet deny that they are all ultimately possible. While the grand schemes which belong to the future are maturing, much progress is being made toward the solution of what Mr. Ferris has called the problem of cheap generation. On the Schoellkopf properties which are or State to spend a cent in their aid. All they crave is permission to build their power bridge. If the project ever reaches a successful issue, it will open a very simple way for utilizing the rapid currents of rivers, and will undoubtedly be extensively copied.

A MODERN UTOPIA.

But all these plans fade into insignatural activation of the property of the globe. With its great natural advantages there is bound to be in time a city of industrial marvels there, but for the present it may more appropriately, be called a city of schemes.

TALKING IN THEIR SLEEP.

"You think I am dead,"
The apple tree said,
"Because I have never a leaf to thow,
Because I stoop
And my branches droop,
And the dull gray mosses over me grow!
But I'm alive in trunk and shoot;
The buds of next May
I fold away,
But I pity the withered grass at my root."

"You think I am dead,"
A soft voice said.
"Because not a branch or root I own?
I never have died,
But close I hide
In a plumy seed that the wind has sown.
Patient I wait through the long winter hour
You will see me again—
I shall laugh at you then,
Out of the eyes of a hundred flowers,"

FLEXIBLE RUBBER DENTAL PLATES.

Our New Process Of Flexible Dental Plates is as yet but little known by the public, and less understood by dentists in general. It has many advantages over the ordinary rubber plates, even gold plates, being lighter and thinner. This plate being flexible, no thicker than heavy writing paper, fits closer to the mouth, will last longer and is tougher than any other rubber. Once tried, no other plate will be desirable. Brought to the notice of the public through Dr. Schiffman only. Lady Attendant to wait on Ladies and Children. Largest Dental Practice in

REMINISCENCES OF GEORGE LEM, THE MONGOLIAN MER-CHANT, OF HIS BOYHOOD DAYS.

Experiences of a Chinaman on a Visit to His Native Land-la L.e Flowery Kingdom During War Time-How Farmers Near Canton Raise Their Crops and Irrigate Their Fields-The Awakening of China to Modern Civilization.

[Contributed to The Times.]

NE day three years ago there was | Canton. A transformation took place had to be told and the questions that had to be asked by the people who had stayed at home, and the man who had wandered so far. To see the familiar village streets, the Goo Chang River flowing by, the rice fields and the banana orchards, brought back all sorts of memories of the days when he was a boy in China.

When Lem was born by a children was a boy in China.

When Lem was born, his advent was hailed with great delight. His head was promptly shaved and then the discussion began of what to name him. Lem, the family name, is represented in writing by a character which signifies "springtime," and which also forms a part of the expression for "shade-of-trees." After long consultations as to the best name to give the new baby, it was decided to add to his surname the given names of Quock, "Nation," and Chung, "Prosperous." So "Prosperous Nation Springtime" became the youngster's name.

The father of the family was a dealer in grain, a raiser of pigs and a maker came the youngster's name.

The father of the family was a dealer in grain, a raiser of pigs and a maker of wine and Chinese whisky. He had a store and warehouse in the business quarter of the village, and at a little distance was the family home. All the streets of the village were paved with brick or stone. They were very narrow, and there were no gardens around the dwellings. But the narrowness really did not matter very much, for the whole width of the street was sidewalk. There were no horses to step on people's toes, and the only means of rapid transit was to be carried around in a sedan chair on the shoulders of lusty porters.

Lem's father was a prosperous and well-considered merchant. His family lived comfortably. Father, mother and children all ate at the same table. Their food was simple, and very different from what Americans eat. Of course, rice was the great standby. Rice sup-NE day three years ago there was a stir in the village of Mar Chow in Southern China, such as had seldom in man's memory distructed the quiet current of events. The news was alroad that Lem Quock Chung, the son of Lem, now dead, but once a prosperous grain merchant of the village, had returned from long sojourn in foreign lands.

Everything seemed strangely changed yet strangely the same to the returned traveler. When only 12 years old Lem had with his parents left his native province of Quong Tong and crossed the Pacific to San Francisco. He wen to live with an American family in Oakland. For years he was thrown far more with Americans than with people plied the place of bread. There was a great deal of fish, for the river flowing by the village and the sea not far distant, supplied such food in great profusion and variety. The family piss were fed on the slops from the distillery, and the result of their luxurious diet was that they were of a sweetness and delicacy of flavor, an ethereal succulence, which no American pig can ever hope to rival. There was abundant fruit. The family ate with chopsticks and big china spoons. There was no catering to the craving for sweet stuffs and desserts to which American families are subject.

"Prosperous Nation" grew and flourished. No longer was his head shaved smooth, but his hair was carefully nur-

The roads were very narrow and bad. One almost never saw a horse. Scattered through the fields were the sheds where the farmrs kept their tools and their oxen, and wheet the produce of the fields and orchards was stored. Always at night a watchman stayed at the barns, while the farmer and his workmen went home to the village for their supper and their night's rest.

There were hills near the village, lonely and picturesque, where there were wild flowers without limit. This was a favorite resort of the children when they were free to set out for a long tramp.

George Lem, on his last visit, soon fell into the ways of the village again. It was a very quiet and sleepy place. During his visit there the Chinese-Japanese war was in progress. Only vague rumors of its event reached the village of Mar Chow, and as the war was far away in Northern China and there was no possibrity that they would be drawn into it, the people listened with little interest to such stories of battle as did reach them.

George Lem says he thinks that the country has progressed since the time he left it, when he was a boy of 12.

The country near the village was beautiful, and there the children often went on long, jolly tramps. "Prosperous Nation," and his companions always trotted along in single file, never side by side.

The country roads would along among the rice fields, the potato patches, the orange groves, the fields of sugar cane, the orchards full of loquat and mandarin and lemon and other fruit trees, past clumps of bananas and cocoanut trees, among the bamboos, and past stretches of pineapples. The farmers were at work with oxen, tilling the fields. Here and there they met men carrying water to irrigate the plants, or saw a big waterwheel which oxen were turning in order to draw the water of the river up on the land.

THE PROSECUTING WITNESS SIGNS A PECULIAR PLEDGE.

The Trial of Crawford Malkim-Los Angeles Law School Incorporated-Gustav Samish's Writ of Habens Corpus.

At the City Hall yesterday the Finance Committee considered the advisability of limiting the privileges of peddlers, so that they should no make their rounds until after market hours. The laundry license and the school and fire department bond ques-tions were put over. The City Auditor's report was completed.

At the Courthquse yesterday Crawford Malkim's trial for the rape of Dora Green proceeded before Judge Smith and a jury in Department One. Gustav-Samish made an effort to gain his liberty on a writ of habeas corpus, the Los Angeles Law School filed articles of incorporation, and an assault to murder case was dismissed by Justice Bryant at the Palms.

PETITION FILED.

in Lawful Money.

SUPREME COURT HAS ONE WEEK TO PASS ON IT.

Whether Public Improvement Bonds Shall Be Payable in Gold Alone or the Alternative Given to Pay

City Attorney Dunn received yester-day copies of the briefs filed in the Su-preme Court by City Attorney Doolittle of San Diego, in which Los Angeles has joined with the petition asking that a rehearing be granted in the case of Musphy against the City of San Luis Obispo. This is the case in which the Supreme Court rendered the decision recently, in which it was held that bonds issued for public improvements under the acts of 1889 and 1893 shall be made payable in gold coin or lawful money of the United States, and not in one or the other. Seven cities have filed similar petitions, and it is thought that the case will be reopened beyond a doubt. The chief interest in the doubt. The chief interest in the chiefs centers about the grounds upon the saught. One of which a rehearing is saught. One of these is that the statute provides that the bonds shall be sold "at no less than their face value in gold coin." From it it is held to equity that the same restrictions cover their payment. The other chief argument for a rehearing is that the statute implies that the legal body which authorizes the bond issue may elect in which of the two ways the bends shall be paid. which a rehearing is saught. On may elect in which of the bond issue bonds shall be paid.

Last Wednesday was the last day allowed for filing the petition for a rehearing. Seven such petitions were filed. The Supreme Court has until June 19 to decide whether the rehearing shall be granted. Unless such rehearing is granted, as the matter now stands, no more city bonds will be issued, as the Council regards it useless to attempt to sell any other than goid-bearing bonds.

FINANCE COMMITTEE.

Consideration Given to Demands of Fruit-growers.

The Finance Committee made no formal report yesterday. The bond propositions which were to have come before it were postponed because of the latest legal complications. The question of regulating a license on out-of-farmers from the farming sections near the city, presented a long petition, bearing numerous signatures, in regard to the City Market. Complaint was made that stall rentals are too high at present, and that there was not sufficient space for those who make application. The committee of petitiones argued that stall rents should be reduced, and that no peddling of fruit or farm produce should be permitted until those persons who use the market are also free to sell. At present they remain at the market until 10 °clock, while the peddlers have made their purchases and started on their rounds never later than 7 °clock. By this arrangement the farmers said that they were shut out if a cheen they are the said that they were shut out if a cheen they are the armers and that they were shut out if a cheen they are the armers and that they were shut out if a cheen they are the said that they were shut out if a cheen they are the said to the following, in regular affi-day in the piedge. By this arrangement the farmers said that they were shut out. If a change were made they argued the consumer would get his fruit cheaper. The Finance Committee moved to refer the matter to the City Attorney to draft an ordinance on the lines proposed.

Some discussion was also had of the desirability of locating a market on Alameda street, nearer the northern business center of the city.

out of the proceedings or of the conclusions reached. The mining stock game on Second street was also taken under consideration and will probably be more fully investigated when legal grounds are established.

The City Auditor's Report.

The City Auditor's report for the week ending June 12 shows the condition of the various funds in the city treasury to be as follows:

Cash, $979.25; salary, over draft, $640-57; fire department, overdraft, $1125.73; common school, $5899.77; library, $716.11; general park, $320.46; East Los Angeles Park, overdraft, $208.21; Westlake Park, $1359.35; Hollenbeck Park, overdraft, $50.75; Echo Park, $1103.03; Elystan Park, $$44.61; street lighting, $72.96; street sprinkling, $97.99; boiler permit, $343.49; police pension, $2489.33; public market, $308.47; dog fund, $602. The summary is as follows: Treasurer's balance, June 5, $146,956,16; receipts during week, $7109.59; demands audited, $10,836.71; balance on hand, $143,229.04.

Will Fight the Bonds.

There is more trouble in store for the Main-street contractors. Notice has been served on City Treasurer Hartwell been served on City Treasurer Hartweit by D. K. Trask, attorney for Mrs. Nora McCartney, who owns Washington Gardens, not to issue any bonds against the property of his client. It is supposed that is the preliminary step to the filing of a suit to enjoin the issuance of the bonds. It is said that the O. W. Childs estate is considering a similar move.

Street Sprinkling.

Superintendent of Street Sprinkling Superintendent of Street Sprinkling Smith is having trouble with people who object to a strip of the street pavement being left dry for the bicyclists. At present also he leaves the street crossings unsprinkled. This order has aroused some criticism and charges of favoritism. Mr. Smith is prepared to order the entire street sprinkled, but he expects that a pretty rumpus will be kicked up by the wheelmen when the edict goes forth.

Dog-catcher Appointed.

Dog-catcher Walters has been offi-cially appointed by Chief Glass. This accounts for the failure of the Council to announce the filling of so important a political berth.

The examination of J. J. Fletcher or charge of assault with a deadly veapon on an old German named M. Luy was held at The Palms last Fri day before Justice of the Peace Bryant, and the defendant discharged on mo-tion of Deputy District Attorney James, who was prosecuting the case. The story gleaned from the testimony given at the examination was as follows: Luy lives on his ranch near the Soldiers' Home, at Santa Monica. Some time ago his wife left him, taking with her their three daughters, and went to live on property which she owned at The Palms. Luy went to The Palms not long ago to visit his family, and was at the time somewhat under the

On the day Luy went to his wife's place, he said, one of the girls was about to leave the place to see Fletcher, who happened to be passing by. Luy said he ordered his daughter back into the house, and threupon Fletcher pulled out a revolver and threatened to shoot him. Fletcher and the women of the Luy family testified that Luy was at the house sparring with his wife and daughters, and wee in a very drunken condition. They also said that Fletcher, who was passing, came into the yard and tried to pacify the excited old man, but had little success. They all swore that no gun was produced by any one.

Flythe alleged at the examination of Samish in the Justice Court that the latter sold a lot known as the Henefeld Block in Downey to him for $600. After the sale, Blythe sald, he discovered that Samish had previously sold a portion of the property to M. E. Frankel. Samish was held to answer, but released on ball in the sum of $1000. The petition for the writ of habeas corpus alleges that no crime was proyen to have been committed. Samish says that the lot sold was what he represented it to be. The transcript of the examination in the Justice Court shows that the property boundaries were described as a certain fence, and beyond that, the description of the exact lines of the lot is very vague.

A Handsome Complexion

of Our Representatives in the Orient.

THIS GORGEOUS CREATURE IS A KAVASS.

HEN the much-debated matter of the appointment of an American Envoy® Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary who shall be "persona grata" to the Sublime Porte is finally stacked away in the lumber room of time with other nine-day questions, the new representative of the United States will find himself face to face with an old difficulty in Constantinople. It's a familiar criticism of our diplomatic service, that the American ministers, by reason of the smaller salary lobatic service, that the American ministers, by reason of the smaller salary for house rent alone, and dipping propely into his private barrel to supply the means for a sumptuous menage. The contrast between American and European diplomacy is in this respect nowhere greater than in Constantinople. The salary of the American Minister is $10,000, with no allowance for house rent. In ordinary times few questions are likely to arise between the Porte and the United States, so that the post is considered less important han those at western courts. On the other hand, the Bosporus is a mighty interesting point to six at least of the great European powers, and their best and ripest diplomatists are sent there and paid generous salary for obox witself.

And, so far as material splendor goes, it does, The British Minister, Sir Philip Currie, occupies, rent free, an enormous building in the form of a hollow square standing in the middle of spacious grounds. The property must be worth half a million or so. In the hot season a smaller building at Therapia on the Bosporus is occupied.

killed in the riots was due to Mr. Terrell's shrewdness. Skilled to read the rough book of human nature, he foresaw the massacres. In August, 1895, he predicted that the so-called réforms would be followed by a slaughter of the Armenians and by great danger to American missionaries. The fact that he demanded, in advance of the massacre, Turkish police protection for every American mission station in Turkey, saved no one knows how many lives. And it is gratefully appreciated by the hard-working missionaries of the interior; by the few missionaries of other nationalities, too, for in consequence of Minister Terrell's demands, protection was ordered for all missionary stations, even those whose ministers had not asked it.

Minister Terrell's demands, protection was ordered for all missionary stations, even those whose ministers had not asked it.

Here is an example of the horse-sense methods of our diplomacy. An Armenian, trembling with fear, reached Mr. Terrell's office one day, and drew from his matted hair a quill. It contained a note from Miss Coffing, an American in Hadyin, saving that the local pasha was going to burn the town and sow its site to barley. Mr. Terrell advised the Porte of the contemplated agricultural enterprise, and added: "If any American in that town is injured, I shall demand and I shall have the head of that pasha." Result: The pasha was recalled, a better one appointed, and the entire town escaped the massacre. Letters attesting Miss Coffing's gratitude are on file in the State Department.

Clergymen know more of some other things than of artillery. When the riots came in Constantinople they wanted, as Mr. Terrell puts it, the Minneapolis to rush the death trap of the Dardanelles.

Now the Dardanelles, for all that they look so meek, mount 127 guns, of which ninety-seven are armor-piercing Krupps. Moreover, the United States have no recognized treaty right to even a dispatch boat.

Before the first massacres in Asia Minor, Mr. Terrell suggested to a Constantinople missionary the propriety of getting at least the women and children out of the country before the storm broke. The suggestion was received with ridicule, and Mr. Terrell was accused of trying to stop mission work.

"I reckon I did curse a trifle, then," says Judge Terrell, referring to the inwas accused of trying to stop mission work.

"I reckon I did curse a trifle then," says Judge Terrell, referring to the incident. "I said I'd be d——d if I'd sacrifice one blue-eyed American baby for all the mission work in Asia Minor."

Mr. Terrell can use Texas talk on occasion, a comfort his successor is likely to miss. He once advised the State Department that a proposed inquiry in Asia Minor was like suing the devil and holding the court in hell.

As to the blue-eyed babies, apprehension was not idle. The time came when the wife of Prof. Smith of Marsovan, looking out of a window at the butcheries, said, "Husband, isn't about time for us to kill the children to keep sovan, looking out of a window at the butcheries, said, "Husband, isn't about time for us to kill the children to keep them from falling into the hands of the Turks?"

It is unfortunate that any friction should have occurred between the missionaries and the Minister. And yet the divergence was inevitable. The missionaries are right in holding that the condition of the Armenians is frightful and should be remedied. Mr. Terrell was right in refusing to plunge his nation into war in a visionary attempt to remedy it. For nothing more visionary than the idea of a new crusade by an Anglo-American alliance against Islamism, which some good people cherished, was ever hatched. It was a fine and generous project, but with a concert of Europe pledged to uphold the Sultan it was and it is rather unfavorable weather for crusading.

So our representative in Constantinople will be lucky, indeed; if he escapes, hot criticism. Armenian massacres made trouble last year. The Greek and Cretan questions are quite as full of difficulties, which no skill can quite avoid or master. But at least we can be confident that the new man will do his work quite as well without a palace and a retinue of gorgeous attachés.
He will lose nothing by the fact that he and Abdul Hamid himself are the only statesmen in Stamboul who wear plain coats.

ON MARRIED TEACHERS.

Sensible Talk from a Valley Contemporary.

[Fresno Expositor:] The Los Angeles Board of Education has announced its intention of dispensing with the services of all married women in the department. Why? Presumably for the old-time notion that a woman with a husband doesn't need the money that she receives from the department, and so that the positions should be given to girls who do. This is narrow and not worthy of Los Angeles, not worthy of an enlightened school board. The Board of Education is not an employment bureau designed to furnish positions for teachers, married or single. Its business is to give the schools the best teachers it can find, and for this there are many things to consider, but not the question of marriage. Fitness, training, high character, good common intention of dispensing with the serv-best teachers it can find, and for this there are many things to consider, but not the question of marriage. Fitness, training, high character, good commonsense and some that isn't so commonthese are the things to think about. When these are found neither marriage, religion nor politics should be considered. Good teachers, like true poets, are born, not made, and there are not so many of them that we can afford to lose the good ones by any whims or partialities of a school board. Another thing: If a woman be a good teacher while unmarried there is every reason to believe that she should be a better one married, particularly K she be also a mother. The young woman who continues to teach after marriage generally does so because she cares for the work. It is her profession, and it is obvious that with this pride she will be apt to do better work than if she were less settled in life, and were merely waiting for promotion by marriage. This is not to suggest that unmarried teachers teach only as a means of earning a living. The State never had so many earnest, conscientious teachers, both single and married, as now.

Again, if a woman was a good teacher at any time because of some or all of the qualifications mentioned, she ought logically to be a better one when mothershood has broadened her sympathies and given her a new and deeper understanding of all children because of the tender, vital mother-interest in her own. And these are things that will be more considered in the future than they are now, for more and more are the schools becoming father and mother and home to many children who lack these in their true sense. In their so-called homes. It is the only way to take care of the children of our own ignorant, depraved classes.

SENATOR WHITE'S POSITION.

The position of Senator White In the harbor matter has been authoritatively defined by himself in recent utterances, which have reached TIMES. The action of Secretary Alger was very provoking, but Senator White was obliged to meet the situation, and has not flinched from it. When the Board of Harbor Commis sioners made its report he at once demanded the same and asked that it Notwithstanding that early request, the document has not yet been returned. The printing has been done, but the maps are not on hand, and therefore Senctor White is unable to produce the paper for study by his constituents. He obtained the printed matter by special favor of the Public Printer. He waited until patience ceased to be a virtue, then procured the adoption of the resolution requiring the Secretary to notify the Senate what, if any, steps were taken or contemplated regarding the harbor improvement. To that

munication referring the matter back to Congress, as already published. Although the plans of Senator White are subject to modification, it is probable that as soon as he can get the floor for consideration of the matter he will make a specinct statement of the situation and offer a joint resolution providing for the expenditure of the appropriation for the breakwater, and then the matter will be referred Committee on Commerce Nothing can be done without a joint resolution. Speaker Reed will not per- names 14,457, which would leave a mit anything to pass the House of total of 137,913. In estimating the Representatives until after the tariff is fully disposed of, and while he cannot compel the adoption of any resolution or the passage of a bill against the wish of the House, he can defeat any legislation which he chooses to oppose, and unless the administration ors Senator White's resolution it will not go through. But the Senator feels it incumbent upon him to agitate the subject so that new members may be informed of the status of affairs, and thus the probability of ultimate relief may be enhanced.

137,913 names, as above mentioned Senator White has stated that he does not feel justified in assaulting President McKinley, whom he still betimes the population of Los Angeles, lieves to be uninformed as to the an increase over the San Francisco actual situation. He will keep piling in facts and contributing knowledge, and will not go into the realm of denunciation unless he is compelled to do so by an exhibition of railroad dominancy in administration circles clearly justifying extreme measures on his part. Senator White, in common with the people of California, feels deeply the outrage and wrong which has been put upon this section by the neglect of the Secretary of War to execute the law of Congress providing for the construction of a deepwater harbor for commerce and of refuge at San Pedro. But Senator is seeking first of all to bring about favorable results in this matter and will not permit his judgment to be led astray by his feelings. creation of the harbor is the essential feature, and to that his best efforts will continue to be directed.

Mr. Burt Soper of Missouri is about the rarest specimen of a murderer the country has had on exhibition for some time. He coolly states that he killed his two children with nd-ax because he was unable to educate them up to his exalted tastes, and then slaughtered his wife for fear would be disgraced by his acts. Soper will make a rare decorafor a Missouri gallows tree.

MORE THEOSOPHICAL THUNDER.

There is more trouble among the Theosophists in the United States. A certain Henry Faulke, of Massachu-setts, issued a ukase, founded on the ssertion that he had received a "precipitated message"-whatever that may be-from a "Mahatma," backed up Faulke in his claim to the leadership of the theosophical society. Now it is stated that Mr. Faulke and his ukase will be ignored by the the-osophical leaders. Faulke wrote a letter to Franz Hartman, a "mystic philosopher" of Berlin, who is at the head of the theosophical society in Germany which, commences thus:

"I have today been appointed by the Mahatmas as successor to Mmg. To this Dr. Hartman replied, briefly and pointedly: "My dear sir: I have your letter informing me of your appointment as successor of Mme. Blavatsky. By a strange coincidence I was the same day appointed successor to Shakes-peare. It now only remains for each of us to show his capacity for the position. Yours truly, "FRANZ HARTMAN."

What will be the ultimate outcome of this quarrel the Lord only knows It is to be hoped, however, that the Theosophists will give due warning to the outside world before they begin to tear things all to pieces, so that we may have a chance to crawl into our cyclone cellars before it is too late.

INDIANS AS SOLDIERS.

THE TIMES recently commented upon the fact that the employment of Indians in the regular army had proved a failure. Referring to the inability of the Indian soldiers to accustom themselves to regulation uniforms, a correspondent of the Chicago Record tells the following amusing story:

"The three companies of Indian reg-ulars joined to the Second Infantry, and stationed at Omaha, were at first very proud of the brass buttons and bright blue cloth of their new unibright blue cloth of their new uni-forms, but when the sense of novelty had worn off, they found objections to wearing them in tidy fashion all the time. It is a tradition that war-riors detest tight garments. Did not the great Napoleon impatiently wrench the butons from a new coat because it was too tight about the neck? The most common complaint which the Indians made regarding their uniforms was that they were too tight and did not permit the air to circulate. 'The company tailor was unable to remedy this defect, so one morning ...e company commander was given a most startling exhbition of Indian ingenuity. He had been asked casually on the night before if he objected to the Indians doing what they could to make their new uniforms as comfortable as possi-ble. In an absent-minded way he re-plied that he did not. The next morning his company of aboriginal Americans appeared arrayed in their dress suits. When the order to "right about face" was given, to his horror the commander discovered that every Indian had cut out the seat of his trousers.' In this astounding condi-tion the Indian soldiers were sum-marily marched from the field." mote the better-provided he would give bonds not to come back here

The Mayors and other officials of the cities and towns of South Carolina held a convention at Spartanburg on May 5. The purpose of the meeting was to bring forth an exchange of views on all topics concerning municipal government, such as control or ownership of water and light plants, methods of street improvement, etc. City Government, an eastern publication, suggests a convention of the Mayors of all the cities and towns of the United States. The health officers, the city engineers, the building inspectors, the fire and police chiefs and the waterworks officials have their national organizations, and all realize that great benefit results from their annual gatherings. The Mayors have a greater interest in municipal matters than any other class of officials; the scope of their labors being wider, and touching upon every branch of municipal work. national convention, affording an opportunity for the Mayors to exchange their views upon the various important questions involved in the manage ment of our municipalities, could not fail to be of material benefit to the officials and their constituencies. A convict who has been in San Quentin for two years, and who, it is discovered at this late day, wa not guilty of the crime for which he was convicted, is to be released, provided he agrees to return to his old home in New Zealand. Just what business it is of Gov. Budd's whether an innocent man goes to his old home or sees fit to stay in California, is something not made entirely clear to an anxious public. It is certainly bad enough to have to serve two years in prison, when innocent, without having the pain of banishment loaded on top of the outrage.

The Arbuckles are preparing to nght the sugar trust in New Orleans, where they have purchased land for a fac tory. The issue of this contest will be watched with much interest by the public. It is not thought that there is much prospect that the Arbuckles would do any better than the trust, if they had the power, but there is an old proverb which tells how, when thieves fall out, honest men have a chance to get what belongs to them. If the Arbuckles are really serious in their intention to attack the big trust why do they not come to California and put up a few beet sugar factories:

The San Francisco Chronicle be lieves that the practice of loud singing in schools, before the vocal organs of juveniles are fully formed, is responsible for many of the cracked "chamber voices" which are found at large in this country. Now that the tall hat ordinance has en adopted in San Francisco there is a demand for legislation against that tiresome person who crawls over his neighbors feet and musses ladies dresses as he goes out between acts to see a man and comes back with a breath that would stop a clock. There merit in the demand. No gentleman will leave a lady alone in a theater unless of necessity, and the owner kind of men who are no gentlemen should be galvanized into the appearance of gentlemen by ordinance, if necessary.

Greater New York has something even greater than the town, and that is a gas trust—a combination of all the big concerns in the city, with a capitalization of nearly $57,000,000. These are large and luminous figures, but Gotham is a place of such big things that they fail to stagger one with their immensity. The gas trust will be able to worry along in the rush of New York life, and we may depend upon it that none of its individual members are likely to die in the poorhouse.

Yellow Hair and Sam Crow, two of the ghost-dancing Montana Indians of the Cheyenne tribe, have been taken in, but Chief White Bull is still scouring the plain and pawing up the war path. The death from fright in New York of a little girl because of hearing a man snore in the next room makes it plain that too many people are permitted to sleep and at the same time disturb the peace. The noisy snorer should either wear a clothes-pin or somebody should wake him up with a belaying-pin.

Gen. Miles thinks there is a possibility of a general war over Turkey. Having gone abroad on purpose to see gore shed, the general should try and shake up some kind of a war before he comes home, or the American people will always have a feeling that he hasn't earned his salary and transportation.

James Gordon Bennett has been in New York and gone away again without firing every man on the Herald, from the managing editor to janitor, and the force is all broke up. The world is full of swift surprises, but the men on Mr. Bennett's paper say this one breaks the record.

FIESTA PARK. There was an open-air spectacular production of "Faust" air spectacular production at Fiesta Park last evening, with village festivals, gorgeous ballets, chorus singing, high-wire walking, gondolas, chariot races and fireworks vithout end, and a big crowd to make glad the heart of the manager. It was foggy and rather damp, but no one seemed to mind very much. It is proverbial that "Hamlet" without Hamlet would seem rather strange, but Faust himself might just about as well as not have stayed comfortably at home as far as his effect upon the success of last night's spectacle goes.

Faust was there, and Marguerite and Martha and Valentine, and the devil and all the rest, but they were merely incidental, and an excuse for the rest of the show.

It was all pantomime. In brief, expressive actions, without one spoken word, the story was told of the enslavement of the scholar by the powers of evil, and the tempting of Marguerite. Valentine, Marguerite's brother, came home from the wars, and the village burst into a whirl of gayety to welcome the soldiers.

In the center of the park, facing westward, was the mammoth stage, a village street, lined by rows of quaint peaked houses, with here and there a garden full of wide-branching trees, and back of the village the mountains. The stage was alive with people. It is safe to say there never before has been a dramatic performance in Los Angeles with such an expanse of stage or such a great number of actors.

of stage or such a great number of actors.

All evening the villagers, soldiers, mountebanks, musicians and peddlers were in constant motion along the village street, eddying here and there in shifting masses of bright color, gayly lighted up by the long circle of electric lights and by the red fire burnt on the edges of the smooth lake, which lay between the stage and the curving line of spectators.

The acrobatic feats were well done, notable among them being the performance of Marksburg, who walked in wooden shoes along a wire strung fifty feet above the lake, and balanced himself with careless nonchalance in the midst of a blaze of fireworks which he set off around himself. Among the other specialty artists were the Pizarellos, pantomimists; Jorette and Birch, the La Veres, acrobats; Frank Mortimer, Juggler; Raymond, the fireater, and Miss Amazona and Joe Williams, who drove Roman charlots in the regulation circus style around and around the inclosure, until "the lady won."

There was plenty of room for the ballet girls, and with Arnold Kiralfy as the grotesque burgomaster at their head, and Constantine, a sprightly toe-dancer, attended by Manita and Chapita, Spanish dancers, as star features, the debuntante dancers marched and wheeled in military evolutions to the music of a wheezy band, or whired and floated through the intricate measures of the festival dances, with charming effect. ing effect.

Ing effect.

Valentine discovered the wrongs of his sister Marguerite, and in a duel with Faust met his death. In a moment gloom overspread the pasteboard village. The devil appeared, and, after quarreling with Faust, decided to put an end to the play by destroying the village, houses, people and all. The lights went out. The air was filled with shrill lamentations. Terrific explosions resounded, fire leaped forth, the houses began to tumble down, and in the general commotion a rheumatic dragon with a cheerful grin on his countenance lumbered uncomfortably along the tops of the mountains, belching fire.

Then darkness overspread the scene, and all that remained was the display of fireworks typical of the volcanoes which were supposedly burning up the village. The fireworks were very effective from the fact that there was a pond of water to reflect the display. There were all sorts of rockets and pinwheels and aquatic serpents; there was a representation of Point Loma lighthouse, and of other set pleces in relation to the fight for a free harbor, all of which brought forth hearty applause, and the spectacle concluded with a display of fountains of fire all around the edges of the lake, tossing forth golden spray. The whole spectacle had the merit of not being very long.

Teach Patriotism in the Schools. LOS ANGELES, June 12.—[To the Editor of The Times:] The proposed issue of increased school bonds has led newhat of an analytical investi to somewhat of an analytical investigation of our Los Angeles public school system. The public seems to be well satisfied with the general condition of the schools except in one particular, that being a deficiency in the history department of the High School.

This is the time of year when the Board of Education and citizens are interested in school affairs. The elevation of educational work is of great interest to every one. Experience and educational training should lie at the foundation of our system. While several principalships need strengthening yet the most important department in our High School is without any directing force.

How can we teach patriotism and

How can we teach patriotism and loyalty with only a smattering of history. The necessity of teaching history in the grades and High School is emphasized by the large foreign element in our country, who are acquainted with European history, but neglect that of our own land of freedom. Something more is needed than a purely text-book method. The most effective way to strengthen the grades is to have a strong High School. Such heads of departments are found in science, classics and mathematics.

The creation of the head of history with a strong, well-trained teacher, is could be well arranged for by simply shifting the work of some teachers to places more desirable for them, and supplying the vacancy with a person trained in modern methods of work, who can make the High School, which is the people's college, a proper lifting force to the lower grammar grades and How can we teach patriotism and

A Suggestion to the School Board LOS ANGELES, June 12 .- [To the Editor of The Times:] Why does not our Board of Education elect the teachers for the ensuing year at the end of the term, instead of waiting a month later? Some of the eastern cities have already elected their teachers, and why should our progressive city be behind those beyond the Rockies? The method at present in vogue is anything but satisfactory, for the reason that many of our educators would like to spend their vacation away from the city, in visiting friends, or camping in the mountains, but can make no definite arrangements until the board meets in the middle of July and relieves the suspense by announcing for publication the names of the successful candidates.

There are other reasons why the election of teachers—should be announced earlier, but the most importhe term, instead of waiting a month election of teachers should be announced earlier, but the most important one of all is that the unsuccessful ones could then have an opportunity of seeking new positions.

No matter how many applicants there may be, school boards should certainly be very slow in displacing old and tried teachers for new ones, and then only for good and sufficient reasons. The anxiety and uncertainty attending the selection of teachers each year is more or less detrimental to the cause of education. Yours truly, year is more or less determined the cause of education. Yours truly,

MONROVIA, June 12 .- [Regular Correspondence.] A meeting of the stock-holders of the Duarte-Monrovia Fruit Exchange was held this (Saturday) morning to consider the cost of fum! gation of the citrus fruit trees of the members. W. E. Cantry, S. T. Mil-lard and J. H. Dunn had been previously asked to prepare estimates of the cost, and the reports made this morning appear to have been satisfactory. There is little doubt now that the exchange will undertake the work of a thorough cleansing of the trees of the members. Heretofore the fruit has been somewhat handicapped by the necessity of washing to remove the black smut, which it is generally conceded has interfered with the keeping qualities of the fruit. It is believed that the fruit will not only be better in consequence of the thorough cleansing of the trees of the scale, but that process will be cheaper than washing the fruit. viously asked to prepare estimates of fruit.

On account of recent pertinent in-quiries as to the alleged difficulties in the way of handling Chinese lottery law-breakers, there is the liveliest activity on the part of the police along those lines. A new deal is on all round, and it is expected good results will follow from the new style of cam-naism.

At 10 o'clock yesterday morning Officer Fowler raided the notorious lottery joint of Fong Chi, No. 340½ South Spring street, and carried away enough

Spring street, and carried away enough material and immaterial evidence to convict the old-time offenders before any right-minded jury in the land. Fowler arrested Chl as the latter was in the act of selling him a lottery ticket—or, rather, a second after he had sold him one, so that there could be no possibility of a mistake as to identity, etc., etc.

In the middle of the afternoon Officers Auble, Spencer and Sparks descended upon Ju Tung's lottery joint at No. 105 North Los Angeles street, arrested the proprietor and possessed themselves of about one thousand lottery tickets, the marking outfits, punches, brushes, etc. Auble and Sparks saw Spencer, in disguise, buy and pay for the tickets, and the case against Tung is considered a strong one.

against Tung is considered a strong one.

At 10 o'clock last hight Officers Hawley and Auble raided the place of Ah Huck on First street, between Spring and Broadway, arresting the proprietor and securing ample evidence to convict him of running a lottery. About the same time Officer Bradley arrived at police head quarters having in custody. Ah Luey, who runs a lottery at No. 410 South Spring street, and Ah Yeng, who conducts a similar business on Second between Spring and Broadway. It is understood that a determined attempt to break up the lottery evil is to be made by Chief Glass, and the most reliable members of the force, It is a new deal and will be watched with interest.

A CHILD'S DEATH

Goes to Play on a Railroad Track and is Run Over. Little Laura Frazier, a child of two years, died yesterday as a result of injuries received in a railroad accident at Glendale on Friday. The child's parents live near the railroad track at Glendale, and the little one had wan-Glendale, and the little one had wandered away from the house and was playing along the center of the track when a terminal train from the city rushed down upon her. The engineer saw the child when within 200 feet of her, and, after applying the air brake, sounded bell and whistle, hoping she would get off the track. Instead she ran down the track ahead of the train. It was impossible to effect a stop in the short distance, and the engine pilot struck the child, hurling her with great force against an embankment at the track-side. Her skull was fractured and her right leg was broken. She lived through the night, and died yesterday forenoon.

Coroner Campbell was notified, and held an inquest in the case yesterday.

Coroner Campbell was notified, and held an inquest in the case yesterday. The jury returned a verdict in accordance with the above facts, and exonerated the engineer and fireman from all blame. The funeral will take place today from Orr & Hines' undertaking parlors, where the remains now are.

The Christian Alliance convention is learly over. Yesterday Elder William C. Stevens was reëlected president. The secretaries of the various branches read reports, showing that there have read reports, showing that there have been liberal contributions for the work of the Alliance, and that a number of missionaries are being supported. About $500 was collected for the benefit of the Santa Barbara Mission. This is the last day Rev. Stephen Merritt will speak. The subject will be, "The Evangelization of the World." J. R. Fraser will preach at 9 o'clock, Mrs. E. J. Scudder at 9:45 o'clock, Stephen Merritt at 10:30 o'clock, I. C. Waddell will lead the testimony meeting at 2 o'clock, and Rev. Stephen Merritt will speak again at 3 o'clock, and at 7:30 o'clock.

But the figures have been doubly verified since. The school census shows the same result, while directory publishers have also completed a canvass with corroborative totals. Some of the sleepy, dead-alive communities up here cannot understand how there could be such a rapid growth anywhere in California. They should make a trip to Southern California and note the spirit of progress that is in the air. It is decidedly refreshing.

A. Beach.) (First time in Los Angeles.)—Mrs. G. B. McLaughlin and Treble Clef Club.

The "Rose of Avontown" is the latest composition from the pen of Mrs.

H. H. A. Beach, whose scholarly work has already placed her in the foremost rank of American composers, and the number will form an extremely interesting feature of the programme.

The story upon which Mrs. Beach has laid the foundation and raised the superstructure of her delightful musical edifice, is told in a simple, little bailad, written by Caroline Mischka, which compares the fate of a young bride, "the bride of a bright June morning," with that of the lovely rose. The story tells how there "Once bloomed a rose in Avontown, Acrose as red as the morning: Its thorns were sharp, but its heart was gold, and diamond dewdrops its cup did hold, A rose for a bride's adorning."

And how "a bride there was in Avontown, when were sharp, but its heart was gold, and how "a bride there was in Avontown."

"For the thorns are for grief and mourning.
With a petal for youth and one for health.
And another for fame and two for wealth.
With the heart for love, lives adorning." And how, as the bride grew old, the rosy dreams of her young womanhood, one by one, like the rose's petals, fell away, until only love remained. "But happy was she—though bent and gray-For love had stayed, her life adorning."

The entertainment of the Echo Musical Club by D. H. Morrison, at his studio, on Friday afternoon, was a delightful affair. The cosy rooms were fragrant with masses of carnations and other flowers, a bowl of refreshing punch occupied a conspicuous position near the entrance, and the programme was followed by the serving of ices and cakes. The programme. for the first time in the club's history, was made up-entirely of vocal numbers, as a pretty compliment from the young ladies to the host. MM. A. Binet and J. Courtier in the Revue Scientifique.

"Experiments were made upon a well-known musical composer, and the investigators endeavored to determine effects produced by musical sound alone, as distinct from those due to emotions aroused by pieces associated with dramatic incidents or words. Isolated notes, chords in unison, and discords were first tried. Both major chords, struck in a lively manner and discords quickened the respiration, the latter more especially. Minor chords tended to retard respiration. When melodies were tried it was found that all, whether grave or gay, produced quickened respiration and increased action of the heart. The lively tune, produced the greatest acceleration.

"Where the sound was wholly up.

sation was usually produced by musical sounds, the effect being very small when sad melodies were played, but well marked when lively airs were played."

The Hext Concert Company, includ-ing Effic Elaine Hext in musical mono-logue and pictures in marble, Reginald Hext, pianist, and Herr Carl Walthers, violinist, will give a concert next Friday evening at the Los Angeles Theater. Miss Hext's strongest effort is said to be an arrangement of a number of Shakespeare's most famous women presented in the historic dress of the times, in strong dramatic or smotional scenes from the celebrated plays. The reading of modern literature from the popular authors is another feature of her work, and the presentation of forty-five human emotions by living statuesque pose, is marble effect forms the climax. Herr Walthers is the violinist who assisted at the recent concert given by the Apollo Club, where he made a very favorable impression, and music-lovers will be glad of an opportunity of hearing him again.

Miss Alice Coleman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Coleman of Pasadena, is expected home from Boston about July 3. She has been studying and teaching the piano and organ in that city for the last two years, and has during the past winter given a number of recitals, both in Boston and Providence. She expects to give recitals in Los Angeles and Pasadene shortly after her arrival, when she will be assisted by Miss Anna Ward of San Francisco, contralto. Of a recital given by Miss Coleman in Boston, the Times of that city says: "She is a delightful artist and her interpretations were all marked by a keen appreciation of the works and the ability to give them a sympathetic and finished rendering. Miss Coleman is one of B. J. Lang's advanced pupils, and her playing was a pleasing evidence of the superior methods of her instructor, which, coupled with Miss Coleman's musical temperament and natural ability, brought about a delightful result."

A new and catchy march, recently composed by Maj. C. Hunt, is the "Pride of the Navy,", dedicated to Irving M. Scott of San Francisco, and published by the Zeno Mauvals Musle Company. The march was inspired by the completion of the great battleship Oregon, and the title page bears a handsome half-tone picture of that vessel.

At St. Vincent's Church today the choir will render Haydn's Sixteenth Mass. The soloists in the "Kyrie," "Sanctus" and "Agnus Del" will be Mrs. L. P. Collette: Mme. Rubo, James F. Nucle and Herr Rubo. The solos in the "Gloria" will be sung by Mrs. Shelley Tolhurst, Mme. Rubo, Mrs. A. Scott Chapman, William Jochum and Herr Rubo. The "Veni, Creator," solo, will be sung by Mrs. Tolhurst. For the offertory, Rossin's trio for contraito, tenor and baritone, "Gratias Agimus," will be sung by Mme. Rubo, Mr. Nuelle and Herr Rubo.

The music at Immanuel Presbyterian Church this morning will be: Anthem, "King All Glorious," (Barnby:) offertory, solo, "Hear Ye, Israel," (Buck)—Miss Jennie Winston. In the evening the programme will include anthem, "The God of Abraham Praise," (Buck:) offertory, solo, "Revel France;" anthem, "Rend Your Hearts," (B. Cecil Klein.)

Frank Colby, organist at Simpson Tabernacle, has engaged as soloists to augment the present Tabernacle choir, Miss Louise Clark of Hollywood, contralto, Max Merten, tenor, and Miss Delphine Todd, soprano.

Miss Jennie Winston's advanced pupils will give a recital at the Marlborough School next Thursday evening.

bat of the 200th representation of "Fra Diavolo," given for the first time in 1830, and the 250th of "The Prophet," of which Meyerbeer directed himself, in 1850, the first representation.

At the end of this month will be produced at the Opera Comique, London, a new opera of Greco-Hibernian interest. Its present title is "The Maid of Athens." The book is by Charles Edmund and H. Chance Newton, the music by Dr. Osmond Carr.

At a recent concert in London the programme included a symphony by the Russian composer Arensky, which, though written ten years before Tchaikowsky's "Pathetic Symphony," also bears the title of "Pathetic," and has a movement in the rare 5-4 time.

It is the fashion in Parls to give song recitals of every conceivable variety. The latest song recital has been inaugurated by Maurice Lefevre. He calls it "Chansons en Crinoline." and in it he reviews a number of popular eongs dating from 1843 to 1863, which touch on the crinoline craze.

With the close of the present season of the Chicago Conservatory, William H. Sherwood will close his engagement with that institution. It is Mr. Sherwood's intention to continue to teach in Chicago, and he will open a studio on and sing, Mr. Max?" she asked. I said "Yes," and Adelina was happy.

When the evening of the concert came and the time for little Adelina to go arrived, I had forgotten all about the bon-bons. The girl had not forgotten. "Where are my candies, Mr. Max?" I said I had forgotten them; I would give them to her next day. No, she wouldn't go on without those bon-bons. I was in despair. It was late. The candy stores were closed. Finally, I ran to a neighboring hotel, where the pastry cook gave me some of the sweets that were as necessary to make Patti go on then as checks proved necessary in later years. I returned, and Adelina took the candies. "Hold them for me, mamma," said she, and on she went and sang. This was in 1853, and I think this was Adelina Patti's first appearance.

DEAD ON THE FIELD OF HONOR. Splendid Tribute to the Fallen

Heroes of the Union.

In Detroit, on Memorial day, Mayor Maybury spoke eloquently as follows:

"The garlands that adorn the graves today will perform their gracious service and ministry—alas, they will fade so soon—but the garlands which the soldiers of freedom have by their valor and their death woven into Liberty's mantle will last unchanged until freedom is the heritage of all nations and all the children of men.

been long and honorable, and his replacement by a younger man is no reflection on his worth. Mr. Chadwick is an American composer from whom much may be expected.

According to the Italian papers Verdihas so little desire for posthumous honors that he has himself decided upon his place of burial. It is in a prettily situated spot in the garden of his favorite villa, Santa Agata, and the illustrious composer has demanded authority from the prefect to erect two modest tombs, one for himself and the other for his aged wife. The official has been obliged to refer the matter to the government, if only to avoid any difficulty with the next owner of the estate.

The musical prodigy continues to crop up in surprising numbers. One of them, a midset of a boy 10 years of age, and by name Du Fresne, is astonishing Paris with his marvelous violin playing. Another child, a Russian, Henri Kartun, 6 years old, has been playing as plano virtuoso in the same city, performing from memory a Beethoven sonata, the Chopin waltzes in A flat and B minor, a Bach invention, and Haydn's fifth sonata. Still another, Mile. Aitschuler, a little girl, also a Russian and scarce 5 years old, has just given a public concert all by herself in Russia.

MRS. NAT COLLINS.

Woman as a Mine Boss-Also a Cat-

Woman as a Mine Boss—Also a Cattle Queen.

[Chicago Chronicle:] One of the busiest residents in all the broad Territory of Montana is Mrs. Nat Collins, known as a cattle queen in that State, in addition to which she manages a mine. She is superintendent of the Montana Queen Mining Company of Columbia Falls, and has been giving her personal attention to the workings of the mine, as well-as to the workings development of the Montezuma and Reindeer leads in that section. Mrs. Collins has been among mines and miners all her life, her father having been killed by Indians when she was about 10 years of age. Consequently her education was neglected in many ways, and today she says she is nothing but a giddy schoolgirl, for she has in her more mature years started in to secure learning from books. Regarding herself Mrs. Collins says:

"I know a great deal about mining, miners and mines. As to my knowledge of mining and miners I can acqueintance with miners and their methods of work, but as to my knowledge of mines, though conscious of it, I am unable to account for it satisfactorily. I never read a work on mineralogy or geology in my lifte, nor heard a lecture upon either of these subjects, except such as any person might occasionally hear in a mining camp. Yet many a hardy miner has asked me to examine his 'trospect' and tell him what I thought of it. I often did as requested, and if my impression (for I cannot say that I had opinions, not having anything tangible to base them on) was favorable I took great pleasure in telling him so, and my guesseé obtained in this way merely for asking were so often proven to be correct on development that many of my friends and acquaintances concluded that I must have something like intuitive knowledge of mines."

Mrs. Stonewall Jackson, widow of the famous general, recently took part in decorating the graves of the Confed-erate dead in Alabama.

George Eliot was near her fiftieth year when she wrote "Middlemarch," and this was succeeded by that power-ful book, "Daniel Deronda."

Mary, Queen of Scots, said: "Talk not to me of the wisdom of women. I know my own sex well. The wisest of us all are but little less foolish than the rest." Berlin is talking about the feat performed by Princess Marie von Hohen-lohe. Wife of the Imperial Chancellor. While hunting on her estate in Russia she killed a bear. The Princess is 68 years old.

Richard Grant White once said of Pauline Markham that she possessed the lost arms of the Venus of Milo. An-other enthusiast declared about the same time that her voice was liquid velve:

Mrs. Burton Harrison will write mag-azine papers on certain aspects of Rus-sian life, as she visited Russia lash sum-mer and enjoyed 'reculiar facilities for studying the higher social side of life at the capital at the capital.

[Philadelphia Press:] Miss Emma Ray of Cass county, Pa., has been commissioned by the Bachelor Giris' Association of Michigan to organize branch societies throughout Indiana. The Bachelor Giris' Association was conceived by the young ladies of Edwardsburg, a little hamlet of several hundred souls, and its outlined object is to fit womanhood for higher positions, in life than to be wives, driven by marriage into the drudgery and slavery of marital life and the inevitable results of ill-conceived alliances.

Campling on Hannals, Testi

[Washington Correspondence Chicago Times-Herald:] There is no rest for Mark Hanna. Three years ago he started his campaign for the nomination of McKinley for President. That tion of McKinley for President. That was a comparatively easy task, as the people were with him. Yet Mr. Hanna put in two years of solid work to make sure of success. Last year he had upon his shoulders the burden of a great campaign. No sooner was that victory won than Mr. Hanna found himself surrounded by officeseekers. For seven months they have been after him day and night. Now Mr. Hanna has another big job on his hands. It is to carry the State of Ohio at the fall election and save his own seat in the Senate. Is it any wonder that Mr.

lection and save his own seat in the Senate. Is it any wonder that Mr. Hanna is getting tired?

Mr. Hanna moves his office' from room to room and from floor to floor in the Arlington Hotel, where he lives. As soon as the office-seekers locate him in one room and overrun him he moves between midnight and daylight to quarters far away in the big house, downstairs or upstairs. In a day or two the crowd has found him out, and there is nothing to do but to pull up stakes and move again.

"Roessle," said Hanna to his landlord the other day, "I wish you would build an addition to your hotel. I have now been in about all the rooms in the house, and I don't know where I am to go next."

Bailey's Big and Busy Bec. [New York Tribune:] "Well, Bailey of Texas has come back to Washington with the biggest and liveliest kind of a bee buzzing in his head," remarked a Democratic Congressman today. "What sort of a bee?" he was asked. "What sort? Why, there is only one what sort? Why, there is only one sort in his estimation, and that is the Presidential bee. Bailey, you know, has been out in Missouri making stump speeches in a district where there was a vacancy to be filled, and the Demospeeches in a district where there was a vacancy to be filled, and the Democrats have carried the district by an increased majority. Champ Clark says Bailey made the most powerful speeches out there that were ever heard in Missouri, and that is a good deal for Champ to say, considering that he also has delivered speeches there, not only in the recent contest, but in years past."

"But what about the busy bee?"

"Why, can't you see? Balley has made a great hit, excited tremendous enthusiasm, and his name is seen ten times in the western newspapers, especially those of Missouri and Texas, where Bryan's is seen once. I think that before his glorious and memorable Missouri campaign Bailey might have been unwilling to say that he would accept a nomination for the Vice-Presidency on the same ticket with Bryan in 1900, but he and his friends would hoot the idea now. The latter say that Bryan's star is already waning, and will have disappeared before the end of his trip around the world, while that of Bailey will steadily continue to grow bigger and brighter. Bailey, they say, is more conservative than Bryan and by far the abler man, and he would be less actively oposed and less bitterly attacked than Bryan was in the last campaign."

"But do you really think Mr. Bailey is inclined to regard seriously the possibility that he might be nominated for the Presidency?"

"Certainly I do. Bailey is a serious man. Why, he even takes himself seriously."

SOLDIERS' HOME.

Entered the Army at the Age of Eighteen and Served in the Pennsylvania Cavalry Through the War-A Solid Silver Water Set Presented to Mrs. Goodale.

SOLDIERS' HOME, June 12 .- [Regular Correspondence.] The announce-ment this morning of the death by suicide at Los Angeles of William H. Sheaffer, a member of the Soldiers' Home, was most astounding even to most intimately acquainted with him. Probably no member of the home was more justly popular by rea-son of his general good qualities, and personal magnetism. Evidence of this may be found in the fact that, notwithstanding his protest, he was at the end of his term as commander of John A. Martin Post, G.A.R., unanimously

A. Martin Post, G.A.R., unanimously reflected, and was commander at the time of his death. Since his admission to the home he has held numerous positions of trust. Corporal of Co. D. sergeant of the firing squad, clerk to Surgeon Hasse at the hospital, captain of home Co. E, and, finally lieutenant in charge of the great dining hall.

Capt. Sheaffer entered the service at the age of 18, in Co. B, Twenty-second Pennsylvania Cavalry, reënlisting in Co. L. Third Prov. Pennsylvania Cavalry, in which he served to the end of the war. He leaves a widow and several children, who reside at Fort Bragg, Cail.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE. Sooseberries Can Be Raised in

It has frequently been asserted that it is impossible to raise gooseberries successfully in Southern California. H. W. Moody of Gardena has disproved W. Moody of Gardena has disproved the tradition by contributing to the Chamber of Commerce some branches from a gooseberry bush, heavily laden with fruit of the finest quality. In the mountains wild gooseberries are found mountains wild gooseberries are found which are of large size and closely resemble the cultivated fruit. Mr. Moody also contributed peaches and almonds, the nuts being of as fine a quality as are grown at Suisun, the center of a great almond-raising district.

The Santa Ana Chamber of Commerce yesterday donated boxes of oranges and lemons. The Downey cigar factory sent in a mammoth cigar, eight inches long and three inches thick, made of tobacco raised in California from Havana seed.

Other Conations were crystallized orange blossoms from Mrs. Timothy Grow of Rivera, clusters of lemons from Charles Alden of Cahuenga, and lemons in the bunch from A. E. Clark of Pasadena.

Scholl, the photographer, has presented to the Chamber of Commerce a carbon photograph of Charles Dwight Willard, its former secretary. The picture will be hung over Mr. Willard's old desk.

A Formal Reply.

A printed form with the blank spaces filled in has been received by the Chamber of Commerce in reply to the resolutions recently sent by the Chamber of Commerce, the Board of Trade, and the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association to President McKinley, urging that he take the San Pedro matter in hand and that the Secretary of War be instructed to proceed at once with the construction of a harbor at San Pedro. The resolutions were forwarded to President McKinley May 31. Yesterday the Chamber 40f Commerce received fform the Secretary of War a printed form, which said: "Your communication bearing date May 31 has been received and will be given due consideration."

The superintendent of mails and his foreman will occupy the postmaster's old office.

PEAT LAND.

How it is Reclaimed and Made Valuable. That Orange county has no monopoly

That Orange county has no monopoly on peat land has been proven by the experience of S. E. Lossing of Lynwood, Los Angeles county, whose ranch is about midway between Los Angeles and Long Beach.

Peat land marks the site of a former marsh. The old marsh nourished thick vegetation, and for countless years the water weeds grew and died and rotted away until at last the slough dried up and its former place was entirely filled with the remains of plants.

The black peat land cannot be cultivated in its natural state. When a horse walks upon it he sinks deep into the tangled mass. The process of reclaiming the land and making it entirely serviceable for agricultural purposes takes about five years. The farmer first cuts up the land without turning it over. He puts wooden shoes on his horse, pieces of board twelve-inches square, strapped over the hoofs, so as to make it safe for the animal to walk on the peat land. Then he cuts up the soil by a sort of plow which has sharp knives and instead of turning the ground merely cuts its way through it.

This process is repeated two successive years. Then some such crop as corn is sown. As soon as it is harvester pigs are turned in, which root in the soil and turn it over and over. Finally, the soil gets into such a condition that it can be used for other crops.

dition that it care be used for other crops.

Mr. Lossing has twenty acres of peat land near Lynwood covered with cclery. This is one of the biggest celery patches in California. The peat land, which is always moist, because of the great capillary attraction of that variety of soil, is eminently well fitted for raising celery.

It is one of Mr. Lossing's desires to build up a company which shall engage in market gardening, run produce wagons to Los Angeles, and there transfer the vegetables to small wagons, which shall go about the city and try to replace the Chinamen, who now have so much of a monopoly on the market gardening and house-to-house peddling of vegetables. It is his wish to have only white men engaged in this enterprise.

Ten years ago peat land could be bought for $5 an acre. Now its richness is recognized, and it is valued at from $500 to $1000 an acre.

Preparations for Receiving the Free drinks in unlimited quantities will be supplied by the Southern Cali-fornia members of the Society of Chris-tian Endeavor to their visiting brethren at the national convention of the organization in San Francisco next

The preparations for "setting 'em up" have all been completed. At the Los Angeles county booth in San Francisco Angeles county booth in San Francisco an abundant supply of lemonade will be served without charge to the visitors. The Chamber of Commerce is collecting enough lemons to make it certain that nobody need go thirsty, and the Chino sugar factory has donated all the sugar that can possibly be used. In addition to this material refreshment the Chamber of Commerce has prepared a pamphlet of information about Southern California for gratuitous distribution at the convention.

NATURAL GAS. It May Be Used in a New Chemical Enterprise.

It looks as if a hitherto unthought-of use would be found for the natural gas which is flowing from most of the oil which is flowing from most of the foil wells of this vicinity, and except in rare instances going entirely to waste. A Denver man has written 10 Secretary Wiggins of the Chamber of Commerce and asked to be furnished with a chemical analysis of the natural gas of this region. He says that if the gas is free from sulphur he would like to come to los Angeles and establish an industry in which the gas would be used for chemical purposes. He did not give any more explicit information as to the character of his enterprise. Secretary Wiggins will send some of the gas to Prof. Rising of Berkeley, head of the College of Chemistry or the University of California and State Analyst, and ask for a report on its chemical constituents.

OMAHA EXPOSITION.

Plans for an Adequate Southern California Display.

Vigorous efforts are under way to insure a proper representation of Southern California at the Transmissippi and International Exposition, sippi and International Exposition, which will be opened at Omaha in June, 1898, and will close in November. It is said by Secretary Wiggins of the Chamber of Commerce that this exposition will probably be the largest and finest which has ever been held in America, with the single exception of the Chicago World's Fair.

The first meeting of the committee recently appointed by the president of the Chamber of Commerce to take charge of the preliminary work of arranging for a display at Omaha will be held at 10 o'clock Monday morning at the office of J. S. Slauson, in the Bryson Block. The members of the committee are: J. S. Slauson, E. F. C. Klokke, R. J. Waters, L. M. Groff and Dan Freeman.

is quite refreshing in this age of fakeism. Here is one by a firm whose reputation is built on a pillar of integrity.

We have placed on our front counter 400 Men's Suits, consisting of sacks and frocks, made up in first-class manner, of black and blue Cheviots, mixed colored Tweeds, Cassimeres, Cheviots and Worsteds, sizes from 34 to 44. These suits are the small lots, from one to four suits left of a kind, all this season's goods, mostly light-weight spring suits; others are medium to heavy. They are arranged in sizes so that you can find your size easily. Some are specially for fat men, some for tall men, and of course the average-size man will have an easy time to get fitted. To make them go quick, we say 1-3 off.

Consider what this reduction means --- It means a $15.00 suit for $10.00, or a $12.00 suit for $8.00, or a $10.00 suit for $6.65. These reductions are as honest as the day is long.

WITHDRAWAL OF FOREIGN APITAL. Many and varied reasons are been advanced for the hard times in the United States in recent years, the United States Investor believes hat the explanation is found in the act that we have been suffering, prinarilly, from the withdrawal of foreign until foreign capital returns to capical, and that we shall continue to suffer until foreign capital returns to us. The Investor says:

"An American just returned from London quotes a Bank of England director as saying that the rejection of the arbitration treaty will cost the United States a thousand million dollars during the next five years. This is one opinion, and possibly it is greatly exaggerated. If, in addition to the European money we have already lost, we are obliged to send back a goodly portion of that still remaining here, our lot will be anything but pleasant. The time is bound to come when the advocates of the go-it-alone policy will perceive their mistake.

"It is only a question with this country of developing its industries slowly with its own money, or rapidly with European money. The first-mentioned policy is not without its merits, but we do not think that it accords very well with the temper of the American people. The get-rich-fast idea would have to be relegated more or less to the background-an abhorrent thought to the majority of this generation. The

COMMERCIAL.

THE CRACKER WAR. A lively war is under way in Los Angeles be tween the local cracker houses and norhtern competitors. Referring to this, and the question of ruinous competition in general, the Commercial Bulletin of this city says:

"A few years ago there was one eracker factory in Los Angeles, and no candy factory. Then came a candy factory. In due time it became noised about that eastern capital was about to come here and put up a combined cracker and candy plant. The local candy factory conferred with the local racker factory, with the result that oth went into the candy and cracker

For many years a large, honestly ory in San Francisco had been doing business on a satisfactory basis, but when the local factories got in modern machinery the San Francisco company discovered that it could not pay freight on finished products, light weight in character and packed in heavy wooden boxes paying high rates, against the home-made product, and so it withdrew from the field.

"In due time there came into the field the agents of a factory 800 miles neid the agents of a factory 800 miles further from here than San Francisco. "After a bit the three houses had a conference and agreed to sell their products by a price list, leaving a fair margin of profit to the manufacturers, while it protected the retail trade against cut prices on the part of one store, resulting in a general demoralization of the trade. "This was a wise policy, and if car-store, resulting in a general demoralization of the trade.

"This was a wise policy, and if carried out would have been beneficial to all branches of trade. But it was found that the soda crackers of one factory were being retailed in certain stores at 5 cents per pound, when the lowest price possible on the goods without loss, by the price list, would be 5.4 cents per pound. This went on for a while and then one of the local factories, seeing that an open fight must be made, decided to choose its own time for the battle, and a red-hot war is on. No one is making any money on crackers, and to make bad worse, an outside house is reported to be backing the outside cracker house in candy, and the war is all along the line."

ie. "Now, it might appear, on a cursory ance, as if this were a matter betten the parties to the fight, and that is not any business of any person uside. It is a matter that vitally meerns the whole community. The tween the parties to the fight, and that it is not any business of any person outside. It is a matter that vitally concerns the whole community. The two local factories use home material, and hire local help. Their presence here is a great benefit to all the rest of us. They cannot go on forever, nor for long, doing business at a dead loss. If by any mishap the factories should be forced to close, all the community would be losers thereby.

"We do not wish to be personal in this matter, and we have no bias in it. But let us suppose a case. Say that in Portland there was founded a cracker company which was doing well. But its management was ambitious and set out to sell crackers, if not cheaper than this factory could make them, certainly cheaper than other factories in neighboring cities could do so. The competition is so close a combination is formed, and stock in the new concern is issued to the owners of plants at several points. Today the Portland plant is operating, but one at Seattle and one at Tacoma are closed. One at Spokane is running two days in the week. The central company is capitalized for a large sum, $300,070, but much of its assets is in these idle plants. It is hardly reasonable that under these circumstances large profits could be made for all the stockholders. "The practical point is, do we want to see this done here? There is talk of a cracker and candy trust. The daily press has published intimations of such a thing. On what basis will it be? Shall our two local plants be forced to shut down, and will their employés be thrown ide on the community? Shall the city lose the great benfits resulting from the presence of these factories here? That is the vital point to us. The retail trade is making no more more yout of crackers and candies under the fight than before it was on. Probably they are making less. The public nay get the goods a trifle cheaper, and save a few cents a week. But should a cracker trust be formed and the local factories closed, then they would pay for the low prices of t

GENERAL BUSINESS TOPICS.

HUCALYPTUS TIMBER. The blue gum of Tasmania (Eucalyptus globulus) in other ways, experimenting so far.

Mr. Ainsworth, of the Redondo Beach Company, informed a Times reporter of Tiesday that his company was using eucalyptus piles for fenders on their wharves, and they gave satisfaction as far as tried; and he added that, if there were a sawmill near by, they would be given a trial as flooring for the company's docks hereafter.

The truth is that the more valuable varieties of eucalyptus have been neglected because they are of slower growth than the Tasmanian gum. The two most valuable varieties for commercial purposes are the red gum of the Murray River and the "fron bark" of New South Wales. All the wooden bridges and trestles on the railroads between Albury and Sydney are of the latter material, and they last 50 percent. longer than the fir of Ore;on or Puget Sound. See what a saving could be effected by growing that timber here. Look at the miles of trestle work between Los Angeles and San Diego that could be built from this homegrown timber, to say nothing of sawed ties which could be produce! much cheaper than the ties we get from the forests of Mendocino and Humboldt.

A man who has lived the greater part of his life in timber-producing countries is The Times' authority for the statement that small sawmills could be made profitable at San Pedro. Long Beach, Newport and Redondo, in cutting eucalyptus lumber for bridge work, telegraph poles and ties. At nearly all the mills on the Columbia River and Pugeta Sound at least 18 per cent. of every log is wasted, but in mills at our bay towns there would be no waste. The slabs could be cut up and sold for firewood, while the sawdust loculd be sold to sprinkle on the floors of saloons. Besides, there is no better way of cleaning linoleum on kitchen floors than by sweeping damp sawdust over it. The sale of this waste would therefore greatly decrease the expense of operating such mills.

Eucalyptus logs will not float for a year after they are cut, but after they have had from ten to fifteen months' seasoning, they can be rafted as easily as pine or any other timber. Hence mills established at our little seaport towns would have to get logs by rail from eight to twelve miles for the past ten years; and what is being done here with any proper

It is high time that this proposition It is high time that this proposition was being given a fair trial on its merits. We bring our square timbers for bridges, trestles, floors of warehouses and stringers for docks, all from Oregon and Washington; our piling and wharf material comes from Coos Bay and Umpqua, and our fence posts and telegraph poles come to us from Sonoma, Humboldt and Mendocino counties in our own State. This timber Sonoma, Humboidt and Mendoemo counties, in our own State. This timber represents the profit on many carloads of oranges, wainuts, almonds, apricots and other fruits; and while The Times es not claim that all this money sent does not claim that all this money sent abroad for timber could be kept at home, yet it does claim that a large portion of it could be saved by the erection of sawmills on our bays to saw up the right kinds of eucalyptus timbers. There is no good or valid reason why any wooden bridge erected south of Tehachepi should be built of material other than that grown in Southern California.

NEW YORK MARKETS.

Stocks and Bonds.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS WIRE.]

NEW YORK, June 12.—Sugar asserted its leadership in the market quite emphatically today and the tone of the market was almost wholly dependent upon developments. The obvious fact that there was selling to take profits on Sugar was the potent influence it causing realizing sales in other stocks. The consequence is an average loss for the day in the prices of stocks. There was vigorous manipulation in Sugar to held it at the high level, and even to raise that level on the strength of the benefits to accrue to the company from the sugar schedule adopted by the Senate. But those who have benefited by the week's rise in sugar argue that the present price represents the value to the stock from the Senate action, and that the next influence to be taken into account is the conference committee of both houses. There was some short selling in Sugar in accordance with this view, in addition to realizing sales which combined to carry the price down nearly two points from the highest. The deal-Stocks and Bonds. gar in accordance with this view, in addition to realizing sales which combined to carry the price down nearly two points from the highest. The dealings in the stock represented fully one-fifth of the total transactions. The fall in Sugar carried down prices throughout the list and practically obliterated early gains in a few instances. The Grangers were comparatively inactive and moved within very narrow limits, but closed with fractional net losses. The week just closed is the third showing continued aggressive strength in the stock market. The market has been sustained all week by the aggressive strength of Sugar, growing out of the agreement of the caucus of Senate Republicans upon a sugar schedule, which is viewed with approval by the friends of the sugar company. This being the case, it was natural that the whole market should give way to a degree under the break in Sugar today on realizing sales. But the week nevertheless represents as a whole another step forward in the progress toward a higher range of values which has been going on ever since the Senate took up the Tariff Bill, and demonstrated that it could ispose of it with reasonable promptitude. A most striking feature of the week's market has been the comparative inactivity, but firmness, of the granger stocks, which strongly led the early improvement. They have halted during the past week, while other groups in the market were taken in hand and brought up to their level. The net changes in the Grangers have been trivial, part showing gains and part losses. The market strength of the stocks of iron companies has been an indication of improving trade conditions, and is attributable to the rise in the price of iron. The fact that the largely increased volume of business in the iron industry which followed the break in the various pools is being succeeded by improving prices, is taken as an encouraging sign. Quite a feature in the market all the week has been the aggressive strength shown by the low-priced shares, especially those of reorganized companies, the preferred stocks leading, Oregon Navigation preferred leads the improvement in this class with a gain of 7½.

The bond market displayed a very step forward in the progress toward : higher range of values which has been

ing. Oregon Navigation preferred leads the improvement in this class with a gain of 7½.

The bond market displayed a very strong tone during the week, with the dealings in considerable volume. The market was governed to a considerable extent by the developments operating to enhance share values. Purchases by leading interests imparted decided impetus to the general tendency, with the inquiry for the llens or organized properties very brisk. Transactions for continental account were in large volume and included purchases of the more prominent international mortgages. The changes in the more active mortgages were mainly unimportant, with gains, however, prevalent aside from Atchison fours, which are off ¼ per cent. and Atchison adjustment fours unchanged. The aggregate sales were $10,136,000.

CHICAGO, June 12.—The Earl Fruit large as the other changes required. deposits $3,855,500. The increase in the latter item, it will be noted, is not as large as the other changes require, showing that the statement does not give the actual condition of the banks. As bearing out this claim, the operations of two banks seem to account for the total changes in the items of deposits and legal tender increase. If the total increase of $3,287,600 in legal tenders, to the Hanover and Western National banks are responsible for at least $3,069,000, and in the item of deposits they show an increase of $2,754,000, which is over 70 per cent. of the total increase reported by all the other clearing-house banks. This, it is needless to say, is an anomalous feature, and not easily explained. Of course the boom in the stock market has some connection with it, but preparations for the payment of the sugar dividend probably accounts for the Western National's increase, and probably since that bank has for its president the segretary of the American Western National's increase, and probably since that bank has for its president the secretary of the American Sugar Refining Company. The loans of the New York banks are now larger than they have been since September 21, 1895, but the banks have more idle money in the vaults than since January 30, last, when the loans were $25,-000,000 less than at present."

CHICAGO, June 12.—The opening in wheat was lower under the dispiriting effect of the hot weather which has at last appeared, and foreign advices fa-voring the bear side of the market, both Liverpool and Paris showing declines. July wheat which closed yes terday at 68%, opened at from 68 to 69% terday at 68%, opened at from 68 to 69% cents, and in a minute or so later it touched 67%. At that point some other factors in the market received recognition, and, being of a bullish character, the price began to improve rapidly. The rise was not checked until it reached 69 cents. Perhaps the most influential factor in the advance was a private cablegram from a Chicago Board-of-Trade man now in London, confirming previous reports of sware confirming previous reports of severe damage to Danubian crops. The crowd had evidently oversold yesterday, crowd had evidently oversold yesterday, and covering was quite general. More complaints of damage by grasshoppers were received from South Dakota, but received little attention, the area affected being as yet too small to attract general interest. Beerbohm's estimated the world's shipments for the week at only 5,600,000 bushels. SOUTHERN PACIFIC WILL PUR-CHASE MOUNT LOWE RAILROAD.

the Bondholders and Unsecured Oreditors—its Acceptance Seems Assured—Importance of the Deal to Pasadena—An Easy Sentence.

PASADENA, June 12.-[Regular Correspondence.] The negotiations for the purchase of Mount Lowe Railway by the Southern Pacific have progressed so far that there is now little doubt that the deal will be carried through A thorough examination of the property has been made by the Southern Pacific, and the title is now being investigated. If the title proves good as it undoubtedly will, the Southern will submit a formal propo sition for the purchase of the road and all its assets. Bondholders will be of-fered 50 per cent. of their present hold-ings, and the unsecured creditors will be offered 25 per cent. of their claims, payment to be made in both cases by the Southern Pacific. The offer will probably be submitted within a few days.

There is little doubt that the terms There is little doubt that the terms will be accepted by both bondholders and unsecured creditors. The road has now been in receivers' hands since last July, and the results have not been particularly satisfactory. Doutless the receivers have administered, the affairs of the road as economically as possible, but for the greater part of the 'time the receipts have not paid expenses. Foreclosure proceedings were instituted in behalf of the bondholders three or four months ago, and in the absence of some such solution as the proposed purchase by the Southern Pacific, the spit may be contested by the unsecured creditors. This might mean an expensive litigation and a mean an expensive litigation and a prologation of the receivership. The fear of these consequences will probably be a powerful factor to induce both the ecured and the unsecured interests to ook with favor upon the Southern Pa-secured and the unsecured interests to look with favor upon the Southern Pacific's offer.

If the deal goes through it promises to be of great importance to Pasadena. It needs no gift of prophecy to predict that if the Southern Pacific acquires the Mount Lowe Railway it will seek to extend its tracks from the present terminus at Colorado street to connect with the mountain line at Rubio Caños. It is also highly probable that if this extension should be made, the line would be electrized from the cañon to Los Angeles. In any event there can be no doubt that with Southern Pacific ownership the travel over the Mount-Lowe line would be vastly increased. It would be advertised as ole of the strong attractions for touries, and would become even better bown in the East than it is now. C. P. Intington does not do business for his health, and he would not consider the purchase of the Mount Lowe Railway unless satisfied that it could he made to pay. Pasadena would profit largely by the successful operation of the road, and would attract a large proportion of the tourists going up the mountain.

It is largely through the efforts of Prof. Lowe that the Southern Pacific was induced to consider the purchase of the property. If the purchase is made it is understood that he will be prominently identified with the future management of the road.

The last day of the High School closed up the fight between the seniors and junior years. While the seniors were rehearsing after school hours for commencement, the juniors brought out the remains of the class flag and trailed it down E street, ignominiously in the dust, when the seniors came to the rescue and a pitched battle waged, with the seniors securing the remnants except a small piece that was tied to the tadi of a dog which they could not overtake. Meanwhile Ralph Fittin of the juniors flaunted a piece of the captured flag before some of the Amazons of the senior class on the school grounds, but he was well repaid for his indiscretion, for with the wild war-whoop of the class yell they were upon him, and in a moment he was floundering in the waters of the fountain, and before he escaped, the female warriors secured the piece of the flag and washed his face with it, scrubbing hard, as if they thought the trouble lay deep.

all animal life. It is the source from which springs the bubbling spirit of joy in young manhood. It is the vital element which keeps up the nerve force in old men to a good old age. When the body is charged with it, the vital powers are strong. Confidence flashes from the eye and the step is firm. Without it—well, how is it with you? Are you weak, gloomy, wanting physical and brain force? If you are weak, you should begin at once using this famous appliance for weak

This appliance is the result of twenty years of close study, and contains all the recent improvements known to science. It is, in fact, a perfect battery, made in the form of a belt, to be worn on the body while the patient resta-

Special Bathing Suits. New and popular styles and materia. Final week of the Sheward sale.

All that remains of the Sheward stock has been touched-with a lower price. All Sheward goods must be disposed of this week. While the lots are smaller the prices are lower than at any time during the sale. The sale of Crockery, Agateware and Kitchen Utensils is an important one viewed from the standpoint of extraordinary value-giving. The great sale of Shirt Waists will be a record-breaker. Don't miss it.

Great Garment Opportunity.

By one of those trade chances, such as few merchants have the nerve and the capital to take advantage of, we have been handed several hundred dozens of Shirt waists and nearly 200 Separate Skirts. Seeing that we got so many is sufficient guarantee that we got them price right, style right. The advantage

The July Delineator, Class of Fashions and Butterick Patterns are now in and on saie. Free pattern sheets to those who send or ask for them. A full and complete line of patterns always on hand. Mail orders filled as soon as they arrive.
